Ann H. Learns Santa Claus Is No Myth; Her Mother To Get Necessary Operation

Touching Appeal Brings Instant Response From Geo-gia Baptist Hospital.

By LAMAR Q. BALL
It seems that little Ann H. was wrong about Santa Claus. Her nine years of life, jammed full of disappointment and disappointment, had caused her to have very definite ideas about just how much a little girl could expect from old St. Nick, regardless of how many letters she wrote to him, regardless of how feverishly she prayed with all the ardor of an aching young heart.

Ann H. is that little girl you read about yesterday. She asked Santa Claus for just one thing—to have her mother get that operation that the doctor says will make her well. Ann was quite sure that Santa Claus didn't carry such practical, necessary things as operations in his bag, but she saw nothing in asking. After all, it was no harm in asking. After all, it was no harm in asking. After all,
it was no harm in asking.

tendent of the Georgia Baptist

TOKYO HINTS DELAY IN REDRESS TO U. S.

Japan Indicates Charge of Machine-Gunning to Alter Conciliatory Policy

TOKYO, Dec. 18.—(Saturday)— (P)—A foreign office spokesman said today that Japan's reply to the United States' note demanding full redress for the sinking of the gunboat Panay would be materially delayed by Japanese charges that Japanese surface craft machine-gunned the Panay after she was bombed.

"This is the most serious type of charge to make," the spokesman declared. "Justice to both sides demands a full investigation, and thorough inquiry cannot be made in a minute."

No Bulletin, Says Surgeon.
Naval officers used testimony from a Japanese army surgeon who treated Panay wounded in an effort to disprove the charge of machine-gunning by surface craft.
This doctor, described as one of several who hastened to the scene and who treated eight foreigners and 13 Chinese, declared none was wounded by bullets. All injuries he saw were from bomb fragments or wooden splinters.

All branches of the Tokyo government maintained silence concerning official information from Washington on machine-gunning of the Panay. Officials declined to discuss the possibility of strong-American representations on this point.

Nippon Ruler Takes Charge Of Panay Quiz

Emperor Considers Recalling Fleet as Humiliating Rebuke.

TOKYO, Saturday, Dec. 18.— (UP)—Emperor Hirohito has assumed personal charge of the investigation into the bombing of the United States gunboat Panay by Japanese naval aviators and the machine-gunning of the vessel by Japanese soldiers on army flat-boats, it was reported unofficially today.

His majesty was said to be considering withdrawal of the entire Japanese third battle fleet from China waters, as result of the incident, and replacing it with the second fleet under command of Vice Admiral Shigetaro Shimada.

It was understood that President Roosevelt's representations had been transmitted to the Emperor in full and that his majesty, on advice of his senior parliamentary advisers, was determined to make full amends no matter how humiliating they may be.

The second fleet is designed for operations in the open sea, while the third fleet is designed particularly for service on the China coast.

Opportunity No. 7, a Family Deserted by Father, Of- fered Atlantans.

Parents who find life a hard problem, as they struggle to rear two or three children, should find comfort as they compare their lot with the misfortunes of Mrs. S.
Two years ago, Mr. S., to whom she had been married for 17 years, suddenly decided to cut loose. He told her coldly, but with finality in his crisp tones, that he was never coming back.

He walked out of the house and left Mrs. S. with the problem of support for eight children, four boys and four girls, the oldest 16, the youngest, one month old.

Father Arrested.
Police found him in Jacksonville. He was brought back to Atlanta, taken into court and placed on probation with orders to contribute to his family's support. He has returned to Jacksonville, where his work is irregular and his contribution to the upkeep of that large family is irregular and inadequate, far inadequate.

3 SHOT, 12 INJURED IN FORD SHOP RIOT

More Than 100 Persons Arrested During Twenty Fights at Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 17.—(P)— Three men were shot, one was overcome by tear gas, at least a dozen persons received severe beatings here late today shortly after employees of the labor-troubled Ford assembly plant quit work for the day. More than 100 persons were arrested.

Two deputy constables were wounded as they escorted approximately 300 Ford workers to their homes from the plant where the United Automobile Workers of America, CIO affiliate, called a strike a week ago.

The officers, Dan Mustaine, 30, and Bob Scott, 20, were struck in the legs by shotgun pellets, but were unable to say who fired the shots. Russell Williams, 28, a bystander, was shot in the hand.

The caravan, with the constables in the lead, was stopped by five occupants of a motor car near Fifteenth and Blue Ridge road. Latter two of the five men were arrested. They said they had stopped the group to demand that the Ford workers be searched for weapons when the fighting started.

LEE BRANCH, WIFE SLAIN BY KINSMAN AT QUITMAN HOME

Attorney's Brother-in-Law Arrested, Adjudged Insane and Taken, Handcuffed, to State Hospital in Milledgeville.

WOMAN'S BROTHER TELLS OF TRAGEDY

Both Victims Shot in Head; Lawyer Was Member of Governor's Staff and School Board.

QUITMAN, Dec. 17.—(P)—Lee
W. Branch, 66-year-old lawyer who headed the state board of education, and his wife were shot to death in their home here today, officers said, by Mrs. Branch's brother, Livingston Snow, who a few hours later was adjudged insane.

Another brother, Russell Snow,
a lawyer, was the only eyewitness.
He gave a graphic account of the tragedy, asserting he was saved by failure of the slayer's pistol to discharge.

The brothers, Sheriff Colin E.
Clanton said, came here yesterday from Russell Snow's home in Cocoa, Fla., where Livingston Snow, retired head of a pecan corporation, had been staying. Officers said a family conference was held here and that Livingston Snow, 54, and an unidentified man, had agreed to enter an institution.

Knew of Condition.
Russell Snow said both he and his brother spent the night at the Branch home. "All of us had known for some time of his mental condition, and his subsequent mel-ancholia," said Snow.

"He knew of the plan for him to leave with me and friends this morning for Milledgeville, where he was to be given treatment."

"Early this morning I was awakened by Livingston leaving the Branch house. x x x he returned to the Branch house."

Transfer of the Fulton Board of Health to the jurisdiction of the State Board of Health under the Ellis health law was voted down yesterday by the Fulton grand jury after city and county health officials and dairymen had indicated opposition to such a plan.

The law, enacted in 1915, provides for the state board to take over each county board on the approval of two successive grand juries of that county. The September-October Fulton grand jury approved the measure.

Several efforts have been made to push the measure through in Fulton county but it has been defeated each time by opposition said to originate in the courthouse.

A number of dairymen from the Atlanta milkshed, which covers three counties, voiced disapproval of the Ellis plan before the grand jury.

They contended the law put control of milk production in the state's hands, and that the law would result in increased taxation.

60,000 Rebels Held in Trap By Loyalists

'Dynamite' Blast Way Through Maze of Gun Nests to Teruel.

HENDAYE, Franco - Spanish Frontier, Dec. 17.—(UP)—Loyalist frontier dispatches reported tonight that 60,000 insurgent troops were trapped in the walled Aragonese city of Teruel under heavy artillery and aerial bombardment while government columns pressed in upon the vital enemy base.

The attack on the nose of the salient was led by several companies of Asturian "dynamite-men" who climbed three rocky clay mountain heights northwest of the city and blasted their way through a maze of machine gun nests.

Meager bulletins from insurgent radio stations admitted violent fighting was under way around the spearhead of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's deep salient 138 miles east of Madrid, but denied that the Loyalists held the city under siege.

The insurgent radio station at Jaca in the north, one of the few sources of Nationalist information since the closing of Franco's frontiers and severe censorship, said the enemy had been repulsed with heavy losses in attacks on the Concud mountain heights outside Teruel.

Loyalist headquarters at Castellon reported tonight fleets of tanks and planes participated in an attack late today on the enemy's advance positions around Teruel, a city of 12,000 inhabitants.

The government is anxious to smash the Teruel salient.

ASSEMBLY VOTES FOR YULE RECESS

Further Means of Aiding County Treasuries Are Sought by Both Houses.

The general assembly yesterday voted to recess its special session next Wednesday until January 3, the Rivers administration yielding to a desire of both houses to seek further means of aiding the county treasuries which face severe losses as the result of the homestead and personal property exemptions already passed and signed by the Governor.

The recess resolution, adopted by both houses, blasted hopes of administration leaders for a sine die adjournment before Christmas but they acceded to it because the state, like the counties, has not yet obtained revenue necessary to carry on its operations.

When the assembly returns from the Christmas vacation leaders said they would present a definite program to give the state $2,000,000 and the counties a similar amount.

"We believe that the recess will do every one good," Speaker Robt V. Harris, the Rivers spokesman said. "It will give the members a chance to advise with the folks at home and it will give the leaders a chance to work out something concrete to be enacted when the recess is over."

The legislature then went into a week-end recess until Monday with the house still considering the intangibles tax law. The senate had passed the first of a series of bills of Senators Purdon, of

SENATE APPROVES FARM PROPOSAL BY VOTE OF 59-29

Combined Strength of Southern Democrats,
Northern Republicans
Sends Pay Measure Back to Labor Committee.

SPECIAL SESSION PLANS DISRUPTED

Crushing Blow to Administration Program Brings Tears to Eyes of Speaker Bankhead, Rayburn.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(P)
The combined house votes of southern Democrats and northern Republicans disrupted President Roosevelt's special session program tonight by sending back to committee the bill to establish minimum wage and maximum hour requirements for interstate industry.

The vote, 216 to 198, brought the career of that battle-scarred measure to an abrupt, if possibly temporary, halt and evoked a triumphant roar of applause from the southern bloc, members of which anxiously kept tab of the balloting as it progressed.

Eight members of the Georgia delegation voted for re-committ-ment, one against while Representative Welch was paired for the action. Voting for were Brown, Cox, Dean, Owen, Pace, Peterson,
Traver, and Vinson. Ramspeck voted against sending the bill back to committee.

Technically, the measure was sent back to the labor committee for such revisions as would bring it in line with the views of the house, but actually, there were few who doubted that the bill was dead for many months to come.

Farm Bill Passed.
But, while the administration program was receiving this rebuff in the house, the senate passed another prime item of the Roosevelt program. Voting 59 to 29 it passed the long-pending crop-control bill and sent it to conference.

Administration leaders, though confident to the last minute of victory in the wage-hour fight, nevertheless made a dramatic appeal against the motion to recommit, made by Representative Hartley, Democrat, New Jersey, at the request of the southerners.

After receiving a prolonged ovation from the house, Representative Rayburn, Democrat, Texas, the majority leader, said "a vote for the motion to recommit this bill, if it is re-committed, is the death of the bill."

He asked the membership: "No matter what our personal opinions may be" to pass the measure, send it to a conference of senators and representatives and then "see how you like it when it comes back from conference."

"Politics," charged.
Chairman O'Connor, Democrat,
New York, of the rules committee, charged that Republicans were "playing politics" on the bill and said:

"The rank and file of the working people of America are interested in the Democratic party carrying out the specific pledge of its platform."

BRITAIN EXPECTED TO INCREASE SHIPS IN CHINESE AREA

High Diplomat Says France Can Take Care of Mediterranean.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(P)—Great Britain looked to the defense of her far eastern possessions to-night as reports indicated Japan's undeclared war against China might soon be extended to the south.

A high diplomatic source predicted an increase in British naval strength in Chinese waters "by early in January" with or without the United States taking parallel action.

A definite decision to reinforce the British China fleet was expected at next Wednesday's cabinet meeting. Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden were convinced, this diplomat said, that France can take care of any developments in the Mediterranean.

Britain was said to have decided action in the far east was necessary to protect British interests.

Tampans Boycott Japanese Goods

TAMPA, Fla., Dec. 17.—(UP)—Yuletide shoppers in the city's five-and-ten stores are boycotting Japanese-made toys and other articles in large numbers, reporter's survey showed today.

Salesmen and women reported the boycott had increased tremendously since the bombing of the U. S. gunboat Panay on the Yangtze river above Nanking, China.

Although the boycott apparently was "spontaneous," it is assuming proportions of a "wave," the survey indicated.

Portsmouth for Shanghai "in about two weeks." It was explained the Birmingham was replacing the cruiser Danae, which returned recently.

Britain also has conferred with France and the Netherlands, the diplomat intimated, on the possibility of pooling their power in far eastern waters. The French are strengthening Indo-China and the Netherlands is worried about the East Indies.

patches asserting that indignation over the Panay affair was subsiding in the United States.

In spite of the new light on the bombing, high officials insisted they were confident, the affair would be settled smoothly. However, it was noted that, as dispatches reported a cooling off of American public sentiment, Tokyo officials were less positive in their assurances that Washington's demands for amends would be met in entirety.

The foreign office spokesman yesterday even asserted "it is not yet decided" whether Japan would reply definitely to the note delivered Tuesday by Ambassador Joseph C. Grew. He explained:

"Japan's note of apology was given (to Ambassador Grew) before the United States' note was handed to Foreign Minister Hirota. Therefore whether some other note must be given is not yet decided."

JAPANESE MILITARY LAUNCH NEW PROBE

SHANGHAI, Dec. 18.—(Saturday)—(P)—A Japanese army and navy spokesman announced today a new and thorough investigation of Sunday's Japanese warplane attack on American vessels in the Yangtze had been launched.

He said the inquiry resulted from declarations by the United States government and many survivors of the United States gunboat Panay that the vessel was machine-gunned from the air and from the river before she sank.

With Japan's highest army and navy leaders in control of the situation in Nanking, Chinese hoped today that the period of harsh military rule which had gripped China's former capital since the Japanese captured it Monday would be ended.

General Iwane Matsui, commanding Japanese armies in the Yangtze valley, and Vice Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa, commanding Japanese naval forces in China waters, made a glittering triumphal entry yesterday into the city which for a decade had symbolized hopes of reborn China.

The Japanese forces carried the war deeper into the heart of the Yangtze valley, richest region of China. Fresh advances north, west and southwest of Nanking brought new areas under Japanese domination and carried grave threats to other Chinese cities.

Inhabitants of Hankow, great midland industrial center 400 miles up the Yangtze from Nanking, and Canton, metropolis of the south, were convinced their cities soon would share Nanking's fate.

Admiral Hasegawa, in a communique announcing his formal entry into Nanking, declared:

"The Japanese government is not satisfied with the success of its arms with the capture of Nanking. The situation is far from being settled."

TOKYO SENDS STERN NOTE TO MOSCOW

TOKYO, Dec. 17.—(P)—The Japanese government today protested to the Soviet Union against illegal detention of its subjects in Russia and in a separate memorandum, demanded a "responsible answer."

The note, presented to the Soviet embassy here, declared that Russia had evaded previous protests and now "the Japanese government takes the position it is impossible longer to forbear while the safety of its nationals is so imposed on."

Japan described the holding of its citizens without trial as "utterly unthinkable in any civilized country and totally impossible in a country where the people's rights are protected by a constitution."

COAST GUARDSMAN CRUSHED TO DEATH

Cutter Was Aiding Disabled Ship at Time.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 17.—(P)—John H. Hansen, chief boatswain's mate aboard the coast guard cutter Mojave, was killed today as the tow of the disabled steamship Carabobo was being turned over to the tug Relief.

Messages to coast guard headquarters here said a hawser from the tug was hooked into a chain attached to the Carabobo, and as the Mojave released its own towline, Hansen was caught and crushed to death.

The Carabobo, with 50 passengers and a crew of 60, is being towed to Jacksonville. She was en route from La Guayra, Venezuela to Brooklyn, N. Y., when she developed trouble. Her position today was 425 miles southeast of Jacksonville.

DU PONT'S DEDUCTION IN STOCK SHIFT ARGUED

WILMINGTON, Del., Dec. 17.—(P)—The right of Irene du Pont to a deduction in his 1932 income tax for losses in a sale of stocks to trust funds he himself set up was argued in United States district court today.

Du Pont is seeking the return of about $154,000 that he paid under protest as a deficiency tax and interest on his 1932 income.

Du Pont set up the funds for his children. He sold 16,000 shares in stocks of the Rubber Securities Company to the funds. The stocks fell in value $1,365,640 from the price he paid in 1929.

Solon Seeks To Aid Americans' Return

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(P)—Representative Allen, Republican, Illinois, today introduced a bill he had introduced a bill to appropriate $600,000 to finance the return to the United States of American citizens stranded in China.

Deliberate Firing on Survivors Of Panay Is Charged by Witnesses

ned, however, by the American sailors who were stripped to the waist. A steady fire was kept up until all civilians were off. Chief Boatswain's Mate Ernest Mahlmann, who was taking a bath when the attack started, dashed naked to the boatdeck and in addition to directing the fire manned a machine gun himself.

"The planes came again," Geist said, "machine-gunning the small boats taking the wounded ashore. Several additional survivors were wounded."

Of one boat crew of seven American sailors, five were wounded when they were fired on by machine-guns as they ferried the civilian refugees ashore.

"There is no doubt the Japanese knew we were Americans," Geist said. "Three flags were visible plainly. One was painted on the side of the ship facing the Japanese motorboat that machine-gunned the sinking Panay."

Could Have Seen Flags. "The machine-gunning planes flew so low they should have seen our flags. They should also have known we were Americans because the day before we told the Japanese army in the area who we were."

McDonald said that "while hiding in the reeds after taking the wounded ashore we heard motorboats approaching and some went down the beach and saw two army landing boats going to the Panay."

"The Panay was still afloat but sinking and her flags were flying," he continued. "One boat fired a machine-gun burst at the Panay and getting no response went along."

"Some soldiers then boarded the Panay, and a short time afterward pushed off."

"The wounded told me the planes diving low machine-gunning the small boats while taking the wounded ashore. Storekeeper Charles L. Ensminger who was slightly wounded receiving his fatal injury in this manner.

The still circling Japanese planes forced the uninjured survivors to carry the wounded on improvised stretchers of blankets into the swamp, where they covered knees deep in mud, the reeds twice as high as their heads. Always overhead were the bursts of machine-gun bullets."

Group United. Finally under the leadership of Captain Frank Roberts, assistant United States military attaché, the group were united and made their way to a small Chinese village where they tore the boards from pig pens to make stretchers. They struggled on five miles further to Hoshien, reaching there about midnight.

The 11 worst wounded were placed in an abandoned hospital of thatch and despite the efforts of Lieutenant Clark G. Graziop, Ingomar, Pa., the medical officer, Ensminger and Sanders died there. Plain wooden Chinese coffins were provided for the two. Roberts draped Ensminger's coffin with an American flag, formally saluted the dead seaman and then led his small party to Hansen.

They were forced to make a ten-hour journey in open boats up the canal and then another torturing two-mile journey overland before they reached Hansen, where they were found by a rescue party from the British gunboat Bee.

Two Japanese destroyers, the Otori and Kasasagi, and the British gunboat Ladybird conoyered the Oahu on the 200-mile journey down the Yangtze from above Nanking where the attack occurred Sunday.

Aboard were the bodies of Ensminger, of the Panay, Captain C. H. Carlson, of the Standard Oil ship Meian, Sandro Sandri, Italian newspaperman, and the Chinese quartermaster of one of the Standard Oil ships. Captain Mender said 18 other Chinese employees of the Standard Oil Company were killed and others were missing.

Fifteen of the more than 75 survivors aboard the Oahu were suffering from wounds. Ensminger's body and most of the officers and crew of the Panay were taken aboard the Augusta. The civilian wounded were transferred to hospitals ashore.

Admiral Harry E. Yarnall reported that two enlisted men wounded in the bombing were in a critical condition.

The Asiatic fleet commander described the condition of three other survivors as serious, and that of the remaining six injured as "favorable."

Admiral Yarnall reported that three of the wounded were transferred immediately from the gunboat Oahu to the hospital of the second marine brigade, on arrival at Shanghai.

The eight other wounded were received aboard the flagship Augusta to be taken later to the Canacao Naval hospital at Cavite, Philippine Islands.

Ensminger received his fatal wound, according to the account of Colin McDonald, correspondent of the Times of London, after leaving the Panay. He had been only slightly injured when the ship was bombed.

Navy Takes Statements

Naval officers from the Augusta Friday morning took a statement from Jim Marshall, far eastern writer for Collier's Magazine, at the hospital where he is being treated for wounds incurred in the Panay bombing. His statement will be used for the official inquiry.

As soon as Marshall's fever subsides, he must undergo an operation for removal of shrapnel and is expected to be hospitalized for a considerable time.

Marshall, after talking across country from his home in the scene of the Panay disaster to Wuhu, was brought to Shanghai earlier in the week aboard a Japanese airplane. Two other survivors came with him.

F. D. R. DISAPPROVES WAR STAND VOTE

State Department Gratified at President's Decision.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(P)—The movement in congress to require a favorable vote of the people before the United States could declare war encountered opposition today from President Roosevelt.

A woman reporter asked the President if he thought a referendum on war was consistent with the representative form of government.

He replied with one word, no. Secretary of State Hull previously had opposed the referendum idea, and State Department officials were gratified at Mr. Roosevelt's stand.

They felt it was timely because of the situation in the Far East. They had been apprehensive that prominence given the war vote proposal at this time might weaken the strong position taken by this government toward the Japanese bombing of the United States gunboat Panay.

RIES FOR MRS. PETERS CONDUCTED AT MACON

Funeral rites for Mrs. Kate Ross Peters, 80, founder of the Writers' Club here and active member of local women's organizations, were held yesterday afternoon in Macon, Ga.

Mrs. Peters died Wednesday night at the residence of her stepdaughter, Miss Ellen Peters, 358 Parkway drive, N. E., after a week's illness.

She was a member of the First Methodist church, the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The Geneva Convention, signed by the chief nations of the world in 1906, is an agreement providing for humane treatment of the wounded in war.

NLRB CHALLENGES COURT JURISDICTION

Counsel Argues There Can Be No Appeal From Board's Certification.

By the Associated Press. Counsel for the National Labor Relations Board argued in the United States circuit court of appeals at Philadelphia yesterday that there can be no appeal of any kind to the courts from the board's certification of an employee election.

Malcolm Halliday, of Washington, D. C., the counsel, told the court that a certification did not constitute an order and that unless it involved an unfair labor practice case no party could be aggrieved by it.

He challenged the jurisdiction of the court to hear a request by an independent union at the Westinghouse Air-Brake Company, of Wilmerding, Pa., to appeal from the NLRB's certification of an election at the company's plant. The election was held last November.

From Weirton, W. Va., it was reported that more than 10,000 employees of the Weirton Steel Company voted for collective bargaining representatives.

Results will be announced today. Forty-five workers from various departments of the mill were chosen.

National Labor Relations Board officials hearing charges in Steubenville, O., that the Weirton company coerced employees against joining the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, declined an invitation to observe the election.

In New York, 80 pickets, the largest number ever convicted in West Side court at one time, were given sentences ranging from 20 days with alternative of fines of $50 to 90 days with no alternative. The pickets, 60 men and 20 women, were charged with disorderly conduct in two mass demonstrations against Automat cafeterias, against which local 302 of the cafeteria employees union (AFL) has been striking since last summer.

Two cargoes of French wines and liquor were tied up at a New York dock as union teamsters and emergers from a French branch of striking members of the alcoholic beverage salesmen's union (AFL). The salesmen are striking to force recognition of the union. Fifteen importers and 2,000 workers are affected, it was reported.

Writer's Diary Tells How Nanking Fell

(C. Yates McDagiel, Associated Press correspondent, was within Nanking during the Japanese army's siege and capture of the capital of China. Here are notes in his diary of those dangerous, uncertain days.)

SHANGHAI, Dec. 17.—(P)—From the diary of a war correspondent in Nanking:

December 13—Near north wall, suddenly saw Japanese climbing through breach in the wall. From car with hands up as Japanese soldier ran toward me with raised rifle. With Japanese permission climbed through breached gate, walked through streets filled with dead Chinese. Some Japanese sense of humor—decapitated head balanced on a barricade with a biscuit in the mouth, another with a long Chinese pipe. Helped foreigners disarm Chinese troops, wandering around filling car with machine guns, grenades, pistols and rifles. Urged soldiers shed uniforms and enter safety zone to save them from being executed.

Watched Looting. December 14—Watched Japanese throughout city looting. Saw one Japanese soldier who had collected $3,000 after demanding civilians in safety zone give up at bayonet point. Reached north gate through streets littered with dead humans and corpses. Finally reached water front, boarded Japanese destroyer, told Panay had been sunk.

December 15—Chinese thankfulness siege over became despairing disillusionment. Went with embassy servant to look for her mother. Found her body in ditch. Embassy office boy's brother also found dead. This afternoon saw some of the soldiers I helped disarm dragged from houses, shot and kicked into ditches. Tonight saw group of 500 civilians disarmed soldiers, hand tied, marched from safety zone by Japanese carrying Chinese "big words." None returned. Many Chinese seized away despite Japanese flags placed in houses and huts. Japanese soldiers attempted enter American embassy where I was living, but when I refused entry they withdrew.

Can't Aid Victim. December 16—Before departing for Shanghai, Japanese consul brought "no entry" notices, which posted on embassy property. En route to the river, saw many more bodies in the streets. Passed a long line of Chinese, hands tied. One broke away, ran and dropped on his knees in front of me, beseeching me to save him from death. I could do nothing. My last remembrance of Nanking: Dead Chinese, dead Chinese, dead Chinese.

BELLEVILLE, Ill., Dec. 17.—(P)—Catholics in the Belleville diocese of 30 southern Illinois counties were admonished indirectly today against attending New Year's Eve dancing parties.

Bishop Henry Althoff in a pastoral statement forbade attendance at dances on nights preceding those holy days on which Catholics are obliged to hear mass. New Year's Day is a holy day.

Shot to Death in Quitman

LEE W. BRANCH.

LEE BRANCH, WIFE SLAIN BY KINSMAN

turned x x x about 8:15 and called to me upstairs that 'sister was waiting breakfast and to hurry on down.'

"He waited at the head of the stairs for me and we walked down together. Mrs. Branch was playing at the grand piano in the music room, and Mr. Branch was sitting in the reception hall. The music room, hall and breakfast room are all open together. At the table Mr. Branch was sitting at the head, and at the foot of the table was Mrs. Branch. Livingston was sitting on the left of Mr. Branch, and I on the right. x x x

Shot Branch in Head. "We had concluded the breakfast, and I was waiting for the cook to bring me a cup of coffee when Livingston suddenly pushed his chair out, stood up quickly and said, 'I am sorry about this,' and fired point blank into the head of Mr. Branch. Mr. Branch remained in a seated position, and, except for the look, appeared as if living."

"My sister fled from the foot of the table," Snow continued, "into the reception hall, and Livingston followed, firing a bullet at close range through her head. She fell across the threshold of the music room, face downward. I believe both were killed instantly."

"As I was sitting opposite Livingston, the table was between me and him, and my sister had been shot before I could get to him."

"Then began a terrific struggle for the possession of the pistol. In the fight, I was thrown violently to the floor, and as he stood he fired at me and missed, and then the pistol snapped twice. The failure of the last two cartridges to explode is what saved my life."

Tried to Reload Gun. "As soon as I could get to my feet I rushed at him, after he had broken the pistol, ejected the shells and was reloading the weapon from cartridges which he had provided and carried in his pocket. In the struggle I tripped him and we fought on the floor."

"He was trying to get the pistol in line with my head, and I was trying to wrench it from his hand. While he was still holding the weapon, trying to shoot me, I succeeded in striking his head with the pistol which was still in his hand."

"Finally I jerked the pistol away, threw it into a corner and then began choking him into submission. He was on the floor and I was on top of him trying to subdue him when Dr. (T. R.) Moyer, who heard the shots, ran to my assistance and then the police came."

Patrolman Grady Marable, called to the home by neighbors, said he was able to overcome Livingston Snow "after a struggle."

Said Snow was "raving." Officers took the man to the Brooks county jail, and Russell Snow swore out a lunacy warrant.

Adjudged Insane. A commission made up of Dr. Moyer, county physician and a neighbor of the Branchs, Dr. J. R. McMichael and Solicitor General George R. Lilly, judged the accused man insane and ordered him committed with a detainer filed in event he should recover.

The solicitor general, Sheriff Clin and County Commissioner Turner Brice left late today with Livingston Snow for the state hospital.

NAZI LEADER CALLS JEWISH BOYCOTT

Act Is in Retaliation Anti-German Activity U. S. Rumania.

NURNBERG, Dec. 17.—Julius Streicher, Germany's anti-Semite, today proclaimed retaliatory boycott of all Jewish stores in his home district of Bavaria.

Streicher was reported to have initiated by anti-Germans boycotts organized in the U. S. States by Samuel Untermyer, York attorney, and in Rumania, M. Moscovici, editor of a Jewish Rumanian paper.

The Nazi district leader played Jewish store windows and tin boards in the picture Nurnberg section with red and the last sentence of which read: "The Jew is inviting boys he shall have it."

GROUP OF BANKS WINS SUIT FOR REPAYMENT

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—The appellate division today missed the complaint in a suit United States Comptroller of Currency James F. O'Connell to compel nine banks to pay $127,000 to the closed Harn National Bank.

The suit originally was brought against 20 banks, all members of the Clearing House Association, settled by payment of $600,000.

A lower court which was held had held that an agreement made in 1932 by the Clearing House Committee to prevent Harnbank's closing was ratified by the nine remaining banks.

Handcuffed. Sheriff Stanton said Livingston Snow told him "he intended wipe out the family and then commit suicide." He said Snow, he ought "to have killed sell first."

The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Branch were taken to a funeral home here. Funeral plans delayed pending arrival of daughter, Mrs. Charles Kirk, by plane from her home in the Canal Zone. Branch also survived by a sister, Mrs. W. Fleming, of Cordele.

Branch's Career. Both Branch and his wife, was 50 years old, were members of prominent Georgia families. Branch was born in Macon, son of the late Rev. and James Orson Branch. He graduated from Emory College, Oxford and began to practice at Macon after his admission to the Georgia bar in 1904. He founded and first president of Quitman Rotary Club.

He was president of the Georgia Association in 1927. He represented the Atlanta C. Line railroad and other firms once practiced in Washington. was a member of the Georgia staff and was named vice chairman of the new State Board of Education recently, actually being the body under Governor Rivers, who is ex-officio chairman.

Mrs. Branch was a daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. J. N. S. Her father, a dentist, had lived South Carolina and Madison, before coming here to practice. Branch moved here in 1898, was outstanding in social and church work here and maintained extensively at the Branch home.

Both houses of the Georgia assembly passed resolutions expressing "sympathy and sorrow over the tragedy today."

At Albany, Governor Rivers, Dr. M. D. Collins, Georgia school superintendent, issued statements of regret over the incident and lauded Branch as an important figure in the state's educational program.

UNIVERSITY SYSTEM TO GET 3 BUILDINGS COSTING $317,728

Regents Award Contracts; Sanford Plans Additional Construction.

Contracts for three additional buildings in the University System of Georgia at a total cost of $317,728 were awarded by the building committee of the State Board of Regents yesterday, Chancellor S. V. Sanford announced.

One is a dairy products building at the University of Georgia. This contract was awarded to A. K. Adams & Company, of Atlanta, at $113,465. The girls' dormitory at the Georgia State College for Women, Milledgeville, was awarded to Ray M. Lee Company at $109,513. The third building was the teacher training school at the Georgia State College for Women. It was awarded to Beers-Collins Company, of Atlanta, at $94,750.

The construction of these buildings is financed on a basis of the Public Works Administration furnishing 45 per cent and the Board of Regents furnishing 55 per cent of the total cost of construction.

According to Chancellor Sanford, these buildings must be completed, according to the requirements of the Public Works Administration, within 10 months. They will, therefore, be ready for occupancy at the beginning of the college session in September, 1938.

Bids will be received at the regents' office before January 15, 1938, on a teacher training building to confer with the Public Works Administration on plans for additional building funds, he said. The regents still have on file application for 16 buildings.

Work will begin in two weeks on the Atlanta Evening College. This project has been approved by WPA State Administrator Gay Shepperson.

Deputy Sheriff G. W. Hughes is shown here by a wax reproduction of Gerald Chapman, bank bandit who was brought from Indianapolis, Ind., to Atlanta federal penitentiary by Hughes in 1924. The satchel in Hughes' hand once contained $60,000 and belonged to Chapman, who was executed in Weatherfield, Conn. Do a Yule Good Deed by Buying 'Big Brother' Edition Tomorrow

Atlantans Will Turn Newsboys for Day With Special Issue of The Constitution, Using Proceeds To Buy Christmas Baskets for City's Needy.

Tomorrow morning the special edition of The Constitution will be sold by Atlanta Big Brothers in the fifth annual Christmas campaign to assure a joyous Yule for Atlanta's needy.

"Buy your copy," A. L. Belle Isle, general Big Brother chairman, said yesterday, "and you can do a part in this campaign to make the city's unfortunate happy Christmas Day."

Last year between 700 and 800 families received baskets of Christmas goodies through the Big Brother campaign.

The Big Brother charity hopper continues to swell with donations from organizations and individuals, officials report, and "it looks like this Christmas will be a merry one."

Radio broadcasts continue with one over WATL at 8:05 o'clock tonight, Faber Bollinger, program director said. The program last night was presented by the Morton T. Nicholas chapter, Disabled American Veterans.

Big Brother Jesse Draper yesterday contributed $10 to the charity basket and a young woman dropped by Big Brother headquarters and donated $5.

Big Brothers continue to parade the wax museum at 60 Peachtree street. Part of the proceeds are going to the Big Brother treasury.

Joe Hill, of the staff of radio station WATL, and Ralph Carroll, the "Homespun Philosopher" yesterday were named to the executive committee in recognition of their services every night and Sunday in the Big Brother programs, Belle Isle announced.

done nothing but abuse and beat her mother, a frail woman who broke under the years of misery and humiliation.

The father has disappeared—"whereabouts unknown."

Now, Mrs. H. can go peacefully to the hospital to undergo the operation she has needed for years, to have removed a physical condition that has prevented her working to support the daughter who is her only inspiration in life.

She can be cured.

Her recovery means that she and Ann can start a new and happy life.

Thanks to Superintendent Barker, the Georgia Baptist hospital, the surgeon who must remain anonymous, and the Woman's Auxiliary of Georgia Baptist hospital.

CAMPAIN PUSHED FOR NATIONAL PARK

U. S. Director Will Visit City To Discuss Plan of Battle Memorial.

A drive to secure a national battlefield park for Atlanta received added impetus yesterday as members of Atlanta's national parks committee announced at a meeting that A. E. Demary, acting director of the National Parks Service, will be in Atlanta on February 1 to discuss the proposed plan.

In a letter to Mayor Hartsfield Demary said he would be in Atlanta on February 1 "for the purpose of consulting with you and interested citizens about the proposed battlefield park." The mayor or previously had extended the parks official an invitation.

Washington Conference. Walter C. Hendrix, chairman of the parks committee, has just returned from Washington, where he has been in conference with government officials, concerning the establishment of the park.

A committee composed of Hendrix, Ivan Allen, Walter G. Cooper and C. F. Palmer, newly-elected president of the Chamber of Commerce, was appointed to draw up resolutions to be sent to the state legislature, city council and various patriotic organizations urging further endorsement of the proposed park by those groups. It was also announced that an executive committee will be appointed later.

Members of the committee pointed out yesterday that there are more reasons for a national battlefield park in Atlanta than anywhere else in the nation, since the battle of Atlanta is recognized as one of the most important battles of the War Between the States.

Battle of Atlanta Famous. "The Battle of Atlanta and the burning of Atlanta is why everybody in the Union is familiar with it," the committee members declared. Importance of the battles of Peachtree Creek and Ezra Church were also stressed.

In discussing the plans, Chairman Hendrix pointed out that the National Parks Service makes no purchases of land for the establishment of any of its battlefield parks.

Possibility of developing the state's tourist trade through the setting up of such parks was cited as one of the principal advantages of pushing the proposed project. Members of the committee pointed to the experiences of Virginia and other states which have marked their battle sites as examples of what can be done in Georgia.

easily capable of supporting the children that he and his wife were bringing into the world at regular intervals.

She Can't Believe It. He was so loyal to his wife and to his family for so many years that even today Mrs. S. cannot comprehend the certain fact that she can no longer expect him to help her complete the job of rearing this numerous family.

She says: "I don't believe him when he says he is not coming back. He was a good husband, always turned his pay right over to me. He was devoted to all of us. The children loved him and used to have wonderful times with him."

"When the younger ones ask me when he is coming back, it makes me feel so bad that I can't stand it. I worry about it all the time."

Flight of Oldest Boy. The oldest boy is 18 years old, old enough to work, a fine boy, but his father's absence has crushed his spirit, made him so timid and lacking in ambition that he cannot seek work actively, he cannot "sell himself."

So, this is Opportunity No. 7. Family Welfare Society workers are confident that a period of treatment will bolster this boy's spirits to the point where he can face his responsibilities and find work fitted to his capabilities.

The workers also believe that a period of treatment of Mrs. S. will enable her to face this crisis in her life with the resolve to carry on.

Need $35 a Month. For this family, $35 a month is needed to supplement the money that the father sends until the Family Welfare Society's plan to make the family self-supporting can be carried out.

Will you help reorganize this family? There are the oldest boy, 18; two girls, 16, 14 and 12; two boys, 10 and 7; a girl, 5, and the baby boy, now two years old.

A family of fine children, well-worth the interest of Atlantans who can help to hold them together, help the children to grow through these critical ages under the care of their mother.

Ser what money you can to Hugh H. Trotter, treasurer of the Opportunity Fund, care The Constitution.

He will be glad to see that your money goes to the S. family. That family needs help badly.

Special Nazi Helium Ship Nears U. S. for 1st Cargo

BREMEN, Germany, Dec. 17.—(P)—The first German transport ship, loaded with special tanks for carrying helium is nearing Houston, Texas, it was disclosed today, to bring back gas for the Zeppelin LZ130.

The transport is due back with its first load the third week in January. Seven shiploads are scheduled to be brought to Friedrichshafen by April, making about 500,000 cubic feet.

Captain Hans von Schiller recently disclosed that another Zeppelin, the LZ131, was under construction at Friedrichshafen.

Atlantan Unwittingly Saves Visitor From Two Armed Rob-Ride Bandits

Pair Force Detroit Man Into Car While Removing Luggage and Drive Off But Flee Auto When Motorist Trails
Them to Report Trunk Door Is Open.

A motorist's desire to be a good Samaritan routed two armed bandits and probably saved the life of George M. Kahn, 38, of Detroit, motor company executive, following a daring holdup early last night.

Kahn told Radio Patrolmen A. J. Coppenger and W. D. Nash he was unloading luggage from his car in front of the home of Robert Cunningham at 514 Parkway drive, N. E., where he intended to visit, when a negro and a white man approached.

"The white man held a pistol on me, and the negro drew a long-bladed knife," said Kahn. "They forced me into the rear of the car and then they drove off. The white man driving. The negro robbed me of $90 in cash and my overcoat."

Blackshear, and Lindsay, of Atlanta, re-opening the penal system of the state.

House Votes Monday.

A vote will be taken in the house Monday on the intangible tax law, Speaker Harris announcing that he hopes to get it through in time for a first session reading during the day in order that it may be finally enacted before Wednesday night. Unless it is passed both houses by Wednesday night it cannot become a law by January 1 as anticipated.

The senate vote of 34 to 8 on the prison bill came after long debate. The bill, one of 10 reform proposals, would create a state board of penal administration to relieve the prison commission of the supervision of prisons and convict camps.

Senators Roy Thrasher, of Watkinsville; Walter Harrison, of Millen, and others attacked the bill. Thrasher contended there was no provision to prevent the board from meeting indefinitely at $7 per day.

Amendments adopted before the final vote would require a $50,000 bond for the treasurer of the penal board and a special order of business to manufacture only those products allowed by law. Parole and pardon authority would be delegated to another board.

10-Cent Levy. The proposal levies a tax of 10 cents per $1,000 on bank deposits and $3 per $1,000 of market value on securities. The levies would be over-all and no other tax on intangible property would be permitted.

The bill contains a section which would surrender claims of the state, counties and municipalities against intangible holders for accrued taxes provided they return this property by January 1, 1938. Legislators called this the "forgiveness clause."

Recorded as Victory. The legislature's refusal to adjourn sine die by Christmas was regarded at the capitol as a victory for forces which have demanded that the session be continued long enough to provide new revenue for counties facing losses under the homestead and personal property exemption laws.

Just before adjournment, however, Speaker Harris announced he would ask both house and senate to hold two daily sessions next week to expedite passage of local bills before the recess.

Tentative plans to have two liquor bills placed on the house calendar and a special order of business were held in abeyance by their sponsors, who said the attempt probably would be made later.

The senate approved yesterday a resolution urging Congress to repeal federal taxes on foods made from cottonseed and peanut oils, and both branches adopted resolutions expressing regret over the fatal shooting in Quitman of Lee Branch, prominent attorney, and his wife.

Unrequited Love Clue Is Sought In Death Mystery

BALTIMORE, Dec. 17.—(P)—Police looked to an ornate pair of spectacles tonight for a clue to the identity of a mysterious stranger, found dead after vainly offering a Baltimore girl $150,000 to marry him.

His unusual and expensive spectacles apparently came from an optical firm in St. Louis or Chicago.

They seem to be the best bet," Police Captain Joseph Itzel said. "I think we'll straiten it out when we trace them."

Police tentatively identified the dead man as "J. C. Carrington," address unknown. Police found poison bottles in the hotel room where his body was discovered yesterday.

Mrs. Patricia Mahan, attractive young divorcee, told police he told her he was Harold Franklin, wealthy Cleveland broker, and that he threatened suicide when she spurned his offer of $150,000 to marry him. He registered December 13 at a hotel here as Harold Franklin, of Kansas City.

A puzzled Harold Franklin, of Kansas City, was at home there today.

Mrs. Mahan said she met the stranger three weeks ago on a train from Austin, Texas, en route to St. Louis, and he followed her here.

Miss Hopkins, who is active in Y. W. C. A. work on the campus, was slightly injured also.

The most seriously injured was a woman whose name and condition were not revealed by Macon hospital authorities.

Others injured, according to an Associated Press dispatch, were Emmett Plunkett, 23, of Boaz, Ala., and Edgar Sanders, 23, of Wauchoula, Fla., both students at Alabama State Teachers College. The bus was carrying 26 persons, officials said, many being college students returning home for Christmas holidays.

All shirts made after January 1 will be two inches shorter front and aft. The average German shirt now is 37.4 inches long in front and 39.4 behind.

It was estimated several million yards of cloth would be saved, since the Reich's shirt production is 30,000,000 a year.

'PUMP-PRIMING,' PUBLIC WORKS, PRESIDENT STATES

Roosevelt, However, Approves Revival of Loans to Distressed Railways.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—President Roosevelt publicly approved the revival of government loans to distressed railroads today, throwing cold water on the idea of new public works spending to pump the pump of inactive industries.

He said at a press conference that the stoppage of loans to the railroads in the last few months was only a general rule and exceptions were to be expected.

No Exceptions. But there would be no exceptions, he added, to his recent decision terminating allocations of emergency public works funds. His statement came after considerable sentiment developed in Congress for a moderate increase in government spending to stimulate business activity.

Some students of governmental action believed the President's statement indicated government outlays to cope with increased unemployment would be concentrated on light work relief projects rather than on steel bridges and similar heavy public works calculated to stimulate the durable goods industries. The light projects cost less per man directly employed in the heavy enterprises.

Relief Spending Boost. The administration already has ordered a $23,000,000-a-month increase in work relief spending and many congressional advocates of expanded government outlays have indicated a further stepping up of work relief would meet their demands.

D.R. NAMES DATE TO SEE GOVERNORS

Executives To Confer With President in Washington January 7.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—W. Robert Jr., industrial consultant for the southeastern Governors' conference, said today President Roosevelt had designated January 7 for a meeting in Washington with the Governors of the southeastern states.

The meeting, to take the place of one scheduled for Warm Springs, is expected to take the form of a luncheon at the White House.

The conference was set up some time ago to promote industrial expansion of the southeast.

The January 7 date was selected, Robert said, "because of its proximity to the Jackson Day dinner celebration in Washington on January 8, which is expected to attract leaders from all parts of the country and many Governors already have planned to be here."

UNCERTAINTY LAID TO F.D.R. POLICIES

Overproduction Also Cited as Cause of Plight of Textile Industry.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Dec. 17.—(AP)—B. B. Gossett, Charlotte textile manufacturer, in an address prepared for delivery before the carded yarn group of the Cotton Textile Institute here today, attributed much of current business uncertainty to "New Deal policies."

"I doubt if there is anyone in the country who can put his finger on all the specific troubles which contribute to the present state of mind of American business," he said.

"It seems safe to assume, however, that the chief contributing causes can be found in some of the 'New Deal' policies, and especially in this true of the state of mind of the general public which has been led to believe that 'New Deal' policies would result in security and reasonable price stability and that no such sharp drop in prices as the country has experienced in recent months would be possible."

Gossett said the textile industry should accept a large share of the responsibility for its own plight because of overproduction during past months. This, he said, has necessitated a sharp curtailment in operations.

MINE BLASTS CASE IN HANDS OF JURY

Bitter Feud Between Rival Labor Unions in Illinois Cited in Trial.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 17.—(AP)—A federal court jury began deliberating tonight whether 36 central and southern Illinois men plotted the series of bombings in the state's coal fields between 1932 and 1935.

The case, in which testimony was given for five days, was given to the jury at 6:50 p. m., Atlanta time.

The trial adds another chapter to the history of the bitter and violent dispute between the state's rival mine unions, the United Mine Workers of America and the Progressive Miners of America.

Judge Charles G. Briggie instructed the jury to determine whether laws had been violated and commented:

"This case is not a contest between two labor unions—you should have no brief for either side."

The name of John L. Lewis, international president of the U. M. W., was mentioned by Chief Defense Counsel A. M. Fitzgerald, who had contended during the trial that Lewis' union was to blame for the coal field violence.

FREE PHILIPPINES, LAWMAKER URGES

Claims Support of Military Committee Members.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Representative Thomas O'Malley, Democrat, Wisconsin, said members of the house military affairs committee had assured him support of a resolution he introduced today to grant the Philippines immediate independence.

"The Asiatic war situation has made the Philippines a powder keg endangering the peace of the United States," O'Malley said. "The sooner we get out of the far east the better."

His resolution provided for no trade benefits to the Philippines other than those that might be negotiated by treaty with any other foreign country.

Former Reformatory Boy Hunted In Bedroom Slaying of Widow

Suspect's Family Says He Discussed Atlanta Trip Before Killing.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Dec. 17.—(UP)—A 19-year-old youth who was released from Huntingdon state reformatory just two weeks ago was sought by police up and down the Atlantic seaboard to night for the bedroom slaying of Mrs. Wilma V. Carpenter, 38-year-old Camp Hill widow. Mary Griffin, 22, a companion, was injured while trying to protect her friend.

Montgomery county authorities assembled further evidence today identifying Wendell Forrest Bowers, of near-by Ambler, Pa., as the youth who shot Mrs. Carpenter down in a bedroom of her home last Monday night. Bowers' family said he had talked of going to Atlanta.

Bowers' trail apparently led south. Members of his family said he left home Monday—the day of the slaying—with the announcement he had obtained a job as an engineer on a construction job at Winchester, Va. The youth was last seen hitch-hiking near Oxford, Pa., near the Maryland state line, Tuesday afternoon.

The proprietor of an Avondale, Pa., service station, where the youth stopped to get warm Monday night, said he talked of going to Virginia and then to the Carolinas and Tennessee. Bowers' family said he also had talked of going to Baltimore, Wilmington, N. C., Memphis, Raleigh, N. C., Spartanburg, S. C., St. Petersburg, Fla., or Miami.

EPIC SPAN PERILED Floods Surge at Bridge Held by Horatius.

ROME, Dec. 17.—(AP)—The surging waters of the river Tiber today were estimated to have done millions of dollars of damage as rains continued to swell the flood which has taken six lives.

Authorities feared the remains of the original Sublucio bridge, where Horatius fought his famous battle in 507 B. C., might be swept away.

Whole sections of Trastevere, Rome's once tough tenderloin district, was under water. Troops were called to aid workers reinforcing barricades.

Two of the city's 16 bridges were closed to traffic and the closing of others was imminent.

Authorities, declaring newspaper descriptions of the flood were unduly alarming to the population, ordered newspapers to give only brief accounts and to print no photographs. They also refused to permit the sending of photographs abroad by wire.

SECRET VALUATION BY RAILWAY SHOWN

Pennsylvania's Own Record Shows $116 Per Share, Stockholders' $87.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—A senate committee heard today the book value of Pennsylvania Railroad Company stock was much greater on a consolidated system basis than the value shown by the corporation's published financial statement.

Chairman Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, of the senate railroad finance committee, made public a consolidated balance sheet for the system's 111 companies. It showed a book value of $116.93 per share of railroad company stock at the end of 1936, compared to $87.64 shown by the report to stockholders.

Martin W. Clement, Pennsylvania president, testified a consolidated balance sheet had been made up annually since 1934 but had never been made public.

He termed the figures in the consolidated system report "mere statistics."

Woman Faces Trial In Attack on Artist

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary Nuese was ordered held for trial today on charges she beat Mary Bishop, an artist, with a bronze statue of Venus De Milo. Trial date was set for January 3.

The woman, whose exotic dance 17 years ago inspired a poem from the pen of Poet George Sterling, listened impassively as Mrs. Bishop accused her of assault with intent to commit murder.

Mrs. Bishop testified the attack followed charges by Mrs. Nuese that she was going out with her estranged husband, Carlos Nuese.

Senator Holt Claims Teacher Would Kill Dad

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—A senate committee heard Senator Holt, Democrat, West Virginia, assert today that his one-time schoolmaster should not be appointed to a federal position because 20 years ago he had urged that Holt's father be shot.

Dramatically, the young senator told the committee of sitting in a high school auditorium in Weston, W. Va., and of hearing Roy Yoke denounce his father, Dr. M. S. Holt, for opposing entrance of the United States into the World War.

He said Yoke told the assembly: "Old Doc Holt should be stood up against a white wall and shot until his blood stained the wall."

Yoke, who was appointed acting internal revenue collector for West Virginia last November 7 upon the recommendation of Senator Neely, Democrat, West Virginia, told the committee he was unable to recall making the exact statement attributed to him by Holt. But he added:

"I don't want to convey the impression I didn't criticize Dr. Holt. I did express the thought of the great majority of the citizens of our part of the state at the time."

OVERSTEPPING SANITY

The escape of two prisoners from Alcatraz, the American "Devil's Island" in San Francisco bay, focuses national attention upon the shocking accusations as to conditions in that prison, made by Robert B. Moxon, a former inmate.

Moxon is declared to be a man worthy of credibility by an outstanding newspaper of the northwest. His crime is one not usually considered among the more serious. He was convicted of forgery and released on parole after one year. He later broke that parole by going to Canada to accept work. It was then that he was sent to Alcatraz to serve the remaining four years of his original sentence.

Such a record seems insufficient to warrant imprisonment at a place supposedly intended only for the worst and most intractable of federal convicts. Certainly, if the federal parole board thought him worthy of liberty after only one year of confinement, his record cannot have been bad.

The conditions which Moxon declares exist on Alcatraz island call for the fullest investigation. If shown to be true, even in considerable part only, they must be remedied. Such inhumanity to even the worst of men is not in accord with the standards modern, decent society is presumed to uphold.

The federal government admittedly has a difficult problem in the disposition of the worst and most desperate types of criminals, the warped creatures who perpetrate kidnappings, heartless murder and other frightful crimes. It is advisable that they be segregated from other prisoners and that every precaution be taken to prevent escape.

But the conditions alleged to exist at Alcatraz, if true, demonstrate once again that it is not safe to place human beings in complete control of other men, removed from all public knowledge and buried in a place out of which complaints cannot be heard. Undoubtedly, the warden of Alcatraz is performing his duties as he believes they are intended. Undoubtedly, there are competent and good men among the guards and other officials there. But, likewise, it is unavoidable that some in authority are not fitted for such responsibility. Despite all care in selection, the simple law of averages makes this inevitable.

In this day and age it is unwise to give any man complete authority, even to the possibility of life or death, over others under circumstances where whatever they do can easily be kept from public knowledge.

The United States government, when it oversteps the bounds of sane severity with the unruly, merely sets an example of brutality that tends to encourage criminal savagery, rather than to lessen and cure it.

The Moxon charges must be sifted to the bottom, by an impartial authority, and, if found true, the conditions at Alcatraz must be changed.

THE DAIRY LOBBY RIDES AGAIN

Sectionalism once again raised its ugly head in the United States senate on Thursday with, as too frequently, the south the intended victim. Through a coalition of northern Democrats and Republicans, the senate approved an amendment to the pending farm bill which prohibits southern farmers from raising livestock or poultry on their lands taken out of cotton production. It likewise prohibits use of those acres for any form of dairy production.

Thus the powerful dairy lobby of the mid-west again moves to hamstring the southern farmer for the benefit of his western confrere. There is no sound reason under which the farmers of the two sections can be classed as rivals. They ought to be closest friends and associates, but the persistent efforts to penalize the south is rapidly turning this section away from other groups of the nation.

Not content with seeking taxes and restrictive laws which would destroy the margarine market for the south's cottonseed oil, the dairy interests now seek to condemn the southern cotton grower to permanent poverty. Not only, under this amendment, would he be restricted as to the amount of his cotton production, but he would be forbidden to produce those crops which best assist him in his struggle away from the ruinous one-crop policy of the past. He would be, under such a law, told in effect that he cannot diversify, that he cannot improve his lot in life, that he must forever remain chained to the wheels of an economic despot.

The passage of this amendment by the senate is another example of injustice to the south—one more demonstration of greed by those who are in position to profit by further economic slavery for the southern farmer.

THE LINEUP

The full significance of the situation in China, and its bearing upon the rest of the world, cannot be understood without keeping constantly in mind diplomatic and economic factors of world-wide import.

It is believed by diplomats generally that Russia would gladly go to the aid of China, on one condition. That condition is a satisfactory guarantee by Britain and France that the Soviet republic would receive the support of those nations against an attack by Germany and Italy. No one doubts that the recently arranged treaty between Berlin, Rome and Tokyo contains provisions for united military support by all three.

At the same time, it daily becomes more evident that Washington and London are acting in fullest co-operation on the eastern situation. Washington has at last realized, what London has known for years, that diplomacy is impotent unless backed by armed power.

In the background of the Washington-London rapport is the proposed trade treaty between the two great English-speaking nations. Even though that treaty may imply nothing more than an agreement to remove some of the barriers which have hindered commerce between the two nations, common sense tells that neither can enjoy any worth-while international trade unless the world, as a whole, is at peace. Thus, with the two great democracies co-operating along trade channels, it would be inevitable that they would join hands, in so far as possible, to exert every force at their command to maintain a peaceful world.

Japan, evidently, is extremely anxious to avoid any break with the United States. The main difficulty in dealing with Japan lies in the fact that her military leaders act entirely independently of their diplomatic and governmental authorities. The army commanders have simply done whatever they pleased in the arena of battle and have trusted to the diplomats to smooth over any difficulties which have resulted.

Since the bombing of the U. S. S. Panay, however, there has been evidenced an intense desire at Tokyo to placate the United States. It is certain that any rupture of relations with this country would be utterly distasteful to the Japanese people themselves. And, without her imports of supplies from America, Britain, France and the Netherlands, where three-fourths of her necessities originate, Japan would not only be helpless against a new foe, but would be quickly forced to end her war activities in China.

The world picture, considered as a whole, is not encouraging to the lovers of peace. But, by dint of cool heads and calm emotions, both by diplomats and the people as a whole, it may yet be possible to avert that cataclysm which the whole world dreads.

SOUTHERN INDUSTRY AWAKENING

The Southern Garment Manufacturers' Association, meeting in Atlanta, launched a movement directed against sectional greed and jealousy of other parts of the nation which has resulted in placing unfair handicaps upon industry in the south.

This group has set an example which should be followed, as rapidly as possible, by other trade associations with interests in the south. Only by united action of those directly concerned can present handicaps and future threats against the expanding manufacturing interests of the south be overcome or prevented. "Cheap competitive practices" of other sections, which are preventing cotton garment manufacturing expansion in the south, are condemned in a statement by W. Gordon McKelvey, counsel for the garment makers group.

In those practices Mr. McKelvey will undoubtedly find the discriminatory freight situation, which has exacted a totally unjustifiable toll from southern products, high in the list. For no logical reason, save the desire of New England and the east to place a stranglehold upon all possible competition from the south, this rate differential has been in force for more than half a century.

There is a movement now under way, instigated by the Southeastern Governors' Conference, to lift this injustice. A hearing has been set before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

If the garment manufacturers and other organizations of southern industries will take active part in this movement, lending their fullest co-operation, the handicap must, eventually, be removed by one means or another.

RANDOM THOUGHTS

(From the Kansas City Star.)

Congress does some funny things. It was ready to spend $100,000,000 on an impossible tree belt to prevent droughts, which it could not do, and to stop windstorms which would merely hop over it and come down with full force on the other side. It refuses to grant the United States Weather Bureau moderate funds for the training of young men in the comparatively new science of meteorology that was first worked out in Norway and that might be expected to revolutionize weather forecasting that is such a vital matter to the United States, and especially to the farm belt.

The Norwegian method of "air mass analysis" was undertaken in Norway under compulsion of the World War, which cut off that country from the weather reports of the belligerent nations. A Norwegian was brought to this country in the 20s to make a weather survey for the air lines. Then he went to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and that institution began pioneering work in the field for the United States. The California Institute of Technology followed. The United States Weather Bureau became interested under its new chief, W. R. Gregg. But lack of trained men has prevented it from putting the new system into operation, except in a very mild way.

Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of M. I. T., who visited Kansas City last week, says local forecasts made by the new method have given most encouraging results. But congress has been so engrossed in other ways to spend money that it has refused to make available the money needed to develop the method rapidly on a national scale. (This last is our own comment; not Dr. Compton's.)

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

The Panay Incident

The Panay, a practically unarmed American gunboat—in reality a small yacht—has been bombed and sunk by Japanese planes, while proceeding peacefully in the Yangtze river, above Nanking, together with three Standard Oil vessels. The action occurs while the Japanese government is making repeated protestations to the United States that it desires wholeheartedly to retain American good will. And while Japanese diplomacy is doing its best to win America away from close co-operation with Great Britain.

The question is: Why did this incident occur? How could it occur?

The Japanese ambassador in Washington says that this was "a grave blunder," a "great mistake," and "completely accidental." We are informed that members of the Japanese cabinet were near tears when the news was announced.

The circumstances of the bombing are such as to preclude any possibility that it was accidental. First of all, the Japanese navy according to news reports, has boasted that there were no more Chinese ships left in the Yangtze. Therefore, any other ships remaining there would be foreign. Second, the identity of the Panay was conspicuously displayed by American flags on every mast. Third, the American naval command in Shanghai had repeatedly informed the Japanese navy of the whereabouts of our vessels in the Yangtze. And, fourth, the Panay was so small that the bombing planes had to swoop very low, where they could plainly see what they were aiming at. And then they bombed it four times.

One is forced to draw a few conclusions from this incident. It would appear that the civilian government of Japan is without authority. There is no connection between its diplomatic policy, and the actions of the army and navy, who really rule Japan. These armed forces of Japan, which have never been defeated, apparently think that they are invincible against the forces of the world, if need be.

The younger and more radical element in the army and navy, it was this element that was responsible for the murder of Taka Hashi and other great Japanese moderates—is riding the whirlwind. It appears that the military command does not dare to punish these people for egregious breaches of discipline. Since this conflict broke out, there have been numerous attacks on foreign ships and on foreigners—including the British ambassador in Shanghai—and while the Japanese government has sometimes reluctantly apologized, and made vague promises of punishing the offenders, guilty of these attacks, we have no knowledge that any such punishment has ever been meted out.

These facts—if they are correct—are of extreme importance. For it would seem that what we are dealing with—and what the Chinese are fighting—is not a responsible Japanese government, or even a responsible army! That the much vaunted Japanese discipline is, at this moment, a myth. And that the aggressive element of the armed forces is criminally irresponsible and reckless.

It is taking, on behalf of the Japanese people, an extremely long chance, counting on the fact that, should they not enjoy this reputation, but you know how it is with a kid in school who finds that he can make the other kids laugh. Irresistibly he is drawn into the role of cut-up, and presently he is bringing home bad marks in deportment as the price of a few laughs.

I am not sure about the limousine-bicycle incident, but it was too studied and mechanical to be funny if it did happen, and any eccentricities in Gene's contract may be less funny than shrewd when examined carefully, because Agnes Fowler's mother did not run any foolish children, and Agnes has always been Mr. Fowler's business office.

As for the mischievous verse, I have read most of it and found it hardly worth comparing to the works in similar vein which are credited to Eugene Field and James Whitcomb Riley and which even now have lived longer than Gene's will.

The Japanese government has "accepted full responsibility" for the attack—so the question now is: Is the Japanese government in a position to accept such responsibility, and what does it amount to? If one reads the situation rightly, or even partly rightly, then one will have very little faith that a promise not to let such events occur again, will, or can be kept. Meanwhile, the position of our government is difficult in the extreme, and the State Department needs the sympathy of cool-headed citizens. There will be those who will counsel that we withdraw everybody from the Far East, and abandon even the most peaceful pursuits there. But if a large part of the world, and by no means the most responsible part, had not become convinced that the democratic nations were upholding to defend anything, and that anything goes in treatment of them, I doubt whether the Panay incident would ever have occurred. We have done a lot to encourage the thought that long chances have excellent hopes of succeeding.

It was on the highway leading away from the city, he was dressed in badly worn but neatly patched and clean overalls. He drove one of those cars of ancient vintage, with rattle and squeak and a vibrating speed limit of about ten miles an hour.

Worth, at the utmost, $10 for metal scrap.

Tied to the back of the ramshackle contraption was a doll carriage and a kiddie car that looked about as expensive as could be found.

A Letter From

"Break of Day."
Received a letter from the McGills, written on board the S. S. Samaria, one day out of Liverpool, England, the city of my birth.

Ralph promised, if time permitted, to hunt up the favorite pup and other old 'aunts' I've told him of. And enclosed a lengthy series of verses, tipped from a Glasgow paper, which were recently recited at the conclusion of a speech in the house of commons. Titled, "Everybody Wondered Why Population Fell." Right clever but too long for reproduction here. But the closing stanza will give you an idea:

The world, in short, which never was extravagantly sane,
Developed all the signs of inflammation of the brain,
The past was not encouraging,
The future none could tell,
But the minister still wonders why the population fell.

Terrier

Protector.
A. C. Sells writes in to describe something he saw recently on Peachtree.

Seems there was a small fox terrier, grizzling and growling, holding at bay a big lumox of a police dog. Behind the terrier was a little boy and it seemed to be the purpose of the police dog to get at the child. But the terrier proved an efficient protector until help came.

As Mr. Sells writes, don't forget your weather survey for the air lines at Christmas and tip your hat when you see an incident such as he describes.

This Was Poor Taste.

John Brown, he whose "soul goes marching on," has never been regarded, in the south, as a particularly noble character.

"John Brown. He swung, didn't he?"
So I think it altogether fitting that protest against that sort of alleged humor should come from the south, just because of the scant admiration for Brown to be found in this section.

Not the First Offense.

Incidentally there are a number of these broadcasting comedians who might, wisely, do a little cleaning of their stock of gags. There has been a tendency lately, in several popular programs, toward violation of the rules of clean humor that must prevail on the air waves. Several programs have been questionable in regard to suitability for indiscriminate broadcasting into the homes of the nation.

Radio would do well to watch its step with extreme care. A few more such offenses and there'll be a chorus of protest that will attract official attention.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From The Constitution of Wednesday, December 18, 1912:

From The Constitution of Sunday, December 18, 1887:

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

WHEN JESUS CAME.

Sunday's lesson is Luke's beautiful story of the birth of Jesus. (Luke 2:1-20.) I nominate this passage as the most beautiful piece of writing you will anywhere find on the entrancing theme of the birth of Jesus. It is all there, but not one syllable too much. Take one word from it, or add one word to it, and you will mar a perfect picture. Please read it again.

Angels, shepherds, stars, songs, precious gifts—these are but some of the heavenly and earthly setting for the event that glorifies all history. One must feel the atmosphere of this Divinely planned setting if he is to grasp the meaning of the event—the Word made flesh. I have sometimes felt that we had gone too far in emphasizing the stable and the cows and the hay, not too far, perhaps, but not going beyond all that to see the Babe of Bethlehem—the little child Jesus, the Saviour of the world. If we allow ourselves to be caught up in the surpassing beauty of the setting with all its exquisite oriental coloring and miss the purpose of it all, namely, the fulfill-

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Book Writer NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Our cafe lit-Gene Fowler, the book writer and moving picture scenarist, consisting of Francois Villon, Rabelais and Rube Waddell in equal parts. Mr. Fowler is said to have waved away a royal purple limousine which had been sent to meet him on his arrival in Hollywood and to have insisted on a bicycle instead. He is said to have demanded a clause in his contract providing that he be docked for days when he does not work, and he is given credit for the composition of some ribald poems which live forever.

Mr. Fowler told me a few weeks ago that he does not enjoy this reputation, but you know how it is with a kid in school who finds that he can make the other kids laugh. Irresistibly he is drawn into the role of cut-up, and presently he is bringing home bad marks in deportment as the price of a few laughs.

I am not sure about the limousine-bicycle incident, but it was too studied and mechanical to be funny if it did happen, and any eccentricities in Gene's contract may be less funny than shrewd when examined carefully, because Agnes Fowler's mother did not run any foolish children, and Agnes has always been Mr. Fowler's business office.

As for the mischievous verse, I have read most of it and found it hardly worth comparing to the works in similar vein which are credited to Eugene Field and James Whitcomb Riley and which even now have lived longer than Gene's will.

Gene had worked for Tex as press agent, and in one of his really hilarious moments, a few months before, had scared him out of his wits by substituting flash-light powder for some other powder in a patent fire extinguisher which Tex had bought from an inventor. Tex liked to demonstrate the invention by igniting the papers in his waste basket and putting out the fire, and on the day that I spent at the white hotel, Tex blew up a boom that would have shattered the windows if they had not been open.

We sat in the balcony watching the morbid crowd go past Rickard's bronze box mounted on the spot where the ring was pitched on fight nights and at dusk went across to the office, where, in about an hour, Gene produced a beautiful poem which throbbed like the belly notes of a pipe organ.

Staff Has Another night, when the Rev. Good Time John Roach Stratton, the reformer, was arrested by a county constable, on suspicion of being a bootlegger, Gene rattled off a gay, impudent parody on the "Midnight Ride of Paul Revere," in which, I recall, he referred to "every oversexed village on earth." He ran it on page 1 next morning.

It was a great shop when he was editor, with no discipline, no editorial rules and no policy, but that the staff should have a good time. We picked our own assignments, and some days we would have four or five signed pieces on the same story. It was too much fun to last long.

All of us drank more or less, but Gene drank less, largely out of respect, I think, for an admonition by Damon Runyon, who had said to him, "I have known a hundred guys who have no right to drink anything any time. I'm one of them and you are the other 99."

My reason for going on this way is that I see an attempt to make a certain sort of tradition of a man who is a diligent worker and one of our first-class writers. A man can pull himself out of shape if he tries to fit himself to a character designed for him by people who know him only superficially, whether it be the character of a good-time Charlie, a village cut-up or one of those gentle bores usually described as just the sweetest soul that ever lived. I know at least six of that kind, and they are a pain in the neck.

So that is the kind of people Gene Fowler ain't and the kind he really is. Now set them up in the other alley.

ment of God's promise in the garden of Eden, echoed and re-echoed by prophets and poets and angels, then it were better that we had never heard of Christmas. This lesson for Sunday will not allow us to miss the point, if we read Luke's beautiful story. After all, God is here expressing His love for a lost and dying world. He elects to come in that way, but from the manger of Bethlehem there led a path to Golgotha's rugged cross, to Joseph's new tomb, to Olivet's mount of ascension. "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

Another Letter From a Bal-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

My Dear Louise:

If I could teach you but one lesson now, it would be this: never accept an idea orism or cause until you look behind it and see what holds it up.

Last night I began reading a continued story and thus for sins made the acquaintance of the most hateful young character fiction.

Though not yet 20, she was old in experience. She was arrogant, overbearing and ill-tempered. She smoked too much and thought nothing of getting drunk at parties. She was wholly selfish and had no respect at all for rules. She felt no obligation or sense of duty. She had no consideration for others and no knowledge of sportsmanship. And she scorned the old-fashioned rules of morality and chastity.

Of course she felt superior to older people who hinted that her way was wrong.

I felt sorry for her, in spite of her need of spanking, for I suddenly realized why she and youngsters somewhat like her in real life behave as they do and have such dangerous ideas.

They know nothing at all about life. They are like birds safe kept in a cage. They can live safely by their standards and protect them from the natural penalty of their follies. They can sneer at the old rules as a caged bird might sneer at a cat—because they are not exposed to natural conditions.

If they had to stand alone and survive competition, they would soon conform to the old rules that ages of experience have proved wise and necessary.

Here's another one, different but similar. You school kids have been debating whether America should adopt the ideas of Stalin or Mussolini.

Both men have followers in America, who think our old system should be scrapped, but they all overlook the backgrounds of the conflicting ideas.

Stalin's so-called Communism grew out of conditions peculiar to Russia; Mussolini's Fascism grew out of conditions peculiar to Italy.

If either man ruled America, with its vast wealth, technical skill, natural resources and power, he wouldn't dream of following his present course.

For America to adopt either scheme would be lunacy. Why give a well-managed queer nostrum because sick men like it?

Many people with axes to grind will offer you ideas that look good on the surface. All I ask is that you look behind them to see where they came from and what supports them.

Love, DAD.

Shanghai

Gesture.

NEW YORK.—The idea that Shanghai is a Chinese city is correct only in so far that it is a city in China, inhabited by many Chinese. But the Chinese did not build it. That immense port with its four and a quarter million inhabitants is the creation chiefly of British and French commerce. A hundred years ago Shanghai did not exist, except as a name on the map given to a collection of fishermen hovels in the mud flats of the Wu creek.

In a hundred years it grew to the size of a modern metropolis, broad boulevards, banking houses, stores, factories, steel and cotton mills, hotels, restaurants and night clubs, a glamorous, roaring international city.

Into that vast conglomeration of buildings and human beings the Japanese have been dumping aerial torpedoes by the score, set entire suburbs on flame while subjecting it to a ceaseless bombardment with naval artillery for the better part of two months. Except for the business section, which is heavily damaged, too, and which was on several occasions strewn with the score, set entire suburbs on flame while subjecting it to a ceaseless bombardment with naval artillery for the better part of two months. Except for the business section, which is heavily damaged, too, and which was on several occasions strewn with the score, set entire suburbs on flame while subjecting it to a ceaseless bombardment with naval artillery for the better part of two months.

Now the Japanese are trying to see how far they can go in ousting the western nations completely from a place of desolation. That is war. The Chinese were punished heavily for daring to insist that they consider themselves the masters in their own home. The incident occurred: a Chinese citizen threw a hand-grenade into the parade and killed a Japanese soldier. The terrorist in turn was pursued and killed by a Chinese policeman.

Marines to the Rescue.

In the rumpest that followed, the Japanese tried to occupy the International Settlement, but American marines, fixed bayonets and trained their machine guns on the Nipponese military. The Japanese seeing the mood of the American troops, gave up their plan of occupying the Settlement and withdrew. In this way a major incident was avoided. It is not difficult to imagine what would have happened if there had been a scrap, or rather a massacre of the United States marines, for the handful of American troops would not have been a match, not even with the aid of the French and British who would have come to their aid, against a couple of pick-

ADERS FEAR LINT HOUSE STORM FARM BILL BODY

Joint Committee led for Trouble in ining Out Differences.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Cotton will be the troublemaker, congressional leaders said, when a joint congressional committee tries to iron out differences between "ever-normal granary" bills passed by the house and senate.

They said the senate bill in part provides greater penalties and more controls over what the farmer grows and sells than the house measure.

Rigid Control.
Sponsors said their cotton program would clamp down rigidly over production next year, and the house measure would apply restrictions until 1939. Corn and wheat sections of the measure also differ from those of the house bill in that they would require farmers to acreage contracts with the state of agriculture before could get federal benefits or marketing quotas would become more much sooner under the bill than under the house measure, because it provides for operation when total supplies are smaller.

Liberalize Terms.
The senate measure carries numerous clauses, liberalizing terms of cotton loans and subsidies, which are not included in the house bill.

Payment now being made under the soil conservation act would be continued on all crops under the house bill, while the senate measure would take 55 per cent of the funds and use them for "payments" to wheat, cotton and corn producers.

WALLACE EXPLAINS BUSINESS SLOW-UP

Attempts To Balance Budget Made Too Fast.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace asserted tonight that "some evidence" that the "completely balanced budget more rapidly than the present system could stand" consisted of the current business situation.

It seems under the present capitalist system that the only way can have prosperity is to incur debt," he said in an address prepared for delivery at a testimonial dinner in honor of Luther R. Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture for the past three years, city treasurer-elect.

The discipline that both government and business must learn this respect is the discipline to act in terms of a little or a little less rather than sudden changes from nothing everything or from everything nothing," Wallace said.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP)—W. Averell Forbes, former United States ambassador to Spain and son of President Roosevelt, said he would make a tour of rebel Spain during January in the invitation of the Franco government.

Wiley Sedgwick, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, who is accompanying Forbes, said they had been there for a political significance to our trip and we are not acting as representatives of any government," said Forbes, who is a governor general of the Philippines before becoming the ambassador to Japan during the period of the Manchurian invasion.

platform to do something about wages and hours."

As perfected, before the recom-mittal vote, the house bill would have established a one-man administrative agency to fix minimum wages of not more than 40 cents an hour and maximum hours of not less than 40 per week, upon the recommendation of a committee of investigation.

By a standing vote of 184 to 77, the house rejected an amendment by Representative Ramspeck, Democrat, Georgia, which would have restored a senate-approved provision for an independent five-member board to administer the proposed law.

Under a provision inserted in the bill the one-man administration would operate within the Labor Department and be assisted by committees of employers and employees in a setup somewhat reminiscent of NRA.

The senate bill would establish a five-man board, an independent agency, to do its own investigating and arrive at its own conclusions, within the same limitations specified by the house measure.

Tears in Eyes.
Speaker Bankhead and Majority Leader Rayburn, tears in their eyes, had "nothing to say" about the defeat.

Representative Dies, Democrat, Texas, grinned his way up an aisle, remarking jubilantly, "I told you we'd do it." He had predicted 202 certain votes for recommitment—14 short of the actual total.

Another leader of the opposition, Representative McReynolds, Democrat, Tennessee, said he figured on 218 votes.

"I'd like to see a proper bill passed to increase wages and decrease hours," he asserted. "But this bill was outrageous about the worst that could have been drawn."

"I doubt the wisdom of passing any wage-hour bill while business is in its present shape. Naturally I'm very proud of the victory."

Before the bill was sidetracked, an amendment was adopted to prohibit the employment of children under 14 and those under 16 engaged in manufacturing or mining. The change was proposed by Schneider, Progressive, Wisconsin. Later Representative Kramer, Democrat, California was successful in adding what was called the "Shirley Temple amendment," exempting child movie stars from the provisions of the Schneider amendment.

Passage of the senate farm bill came after four weeks of wrangling, marked by repeated bi-partisan assaults on the measure.

Goes to Conference.
The bill, together with a farm measure passed by the house, now goes to a conference committee of senators and representatives for adjustment of differences.

Because of many differences, it has been assumed generally that the conference committee will be unable to reach an agreement prior to the end of the special session, scheduled December 22.

Secretary Wallace predicted yesterday the conference committee would formulate a measure which would be stronger than either the house or the senate bills.

The senate first refused to substitute "cost of production" farm bill by Senator McCaddoo, Democrat, California, for administration's "ever-normal granary" legislation.

It rejected the proposal of the former secretary of the treasury by a vote of 46 to 40.

Vice President Garner named Senators Smith, Democrat, South Carolina; McGill, Democrat, Kansas; Pope, Democrat, Idaho; Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama; Hatch, Democrat, New Mexico; Frazier, Republican, North Dakota, and Capper, Republican, Kansas, to be members of the conference committee.

He then placed before the senate the anti-lynch bill, against which southern members are expected to conduct a prolonged filibuster.

Asked whether the chamber would make the anti-lynch debate its next business, Democratic Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, said that would be settled Monday.

The senate also voted to establish four regional research laboratories to find new uses for farm products.

It approved an amendment by Senator Bilbo, Democrat, Mississippi, to the "ever-normal granary" farm bill and thus authorized $2,000,000 for the laboratories in their first year and $1,000,000 annually.

HOUSING MEASURE COMES UP TODAY

Amendment To Cut First Payment From 20 to 10
Per Cent, Reported.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(UP)—The house tonight prepared for floor consideration tomorrow of President Roosevelt's proposed amendments to broaden the existing housing act provisions as a spearhead of the administration drive to end the current business slump.

The house rules committee ap-proved a rule calling for four hours of general debate, leaving the measure open for additional amendments Monday.

One amendment reported favor-ably by the banking and currency committee would lower the down payment on the purchase of homes of $6,000 or less from 20 per cent to 10 per cent.

JUNIOR C. OF C. HEAD ASKS CO-OPERATION

Press and Radio Honored at Dinner at Capital City Club.

Co-operation of all Atlanta civic organizations in promoting a broader program during 1938 was called for last night by William A. Horne Jr. as he accepted the presi-dency of the Atlanta Junior Cham-ber of Commerce at the 16th an-nual inaugural dinner of homes of $6,000 or less from 20 per cent to 10 per cent.

In outlining his program for next year, the new president said the organization plans to take as one of its principal projects the advertisement of the cyclorama. He added that the establishment of a library for underprivileged children would also be stressed. With such a library, he explained, children would be allowed to have toys all the year in much the same manner as books are made avail-able to the public.

Traffic Improvements.
Improvement of the traffic situa-tion and a regional conference in March of more than 300 Jay-vees from five states are among other things to be sponsored by the organization during 1938.

"I want us to be a group of go-getters and I solicit the support of every civic organization in Atlan-ta," Horne declared.

Other new officers are Herbert B. Hayes, executive vice presi-dent; R. W. Schilling, treasurer; Vernon Brown, William A. Bugg and Terrell J. Ross, vice presi-dents, and Fain Peek, executive secretary.

Horne succeeds F. Dade Kelley as president. Kelley acted as toastmaster at the dinner last night.

In paying tribute to the press and radio, I. K. Hay, assistant United States district attorney, de-clared that the newspapers and ra-dio stations "have given full co-operation in supporting the educa-tional program of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and I am sure that they have responded as generously and as hospitably as any city in the United States."

Herbert Porter, publisher of the Atlanta Georgian, responded to the tribute.

Senate Farm Bill Tries To Balance Supply, Demand

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Advocates of the "ever-normal granary" bill which passed the senate tonight contend it will stabilize both prices and supplies of five major crops and so benefit farmers and consumers. Opponents not only question its efficacy but say it calls for harmful regulation.

In general, it is an attempt to balance the supply of and demand for corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco and rice, by controlling production and marketing.

Estimate Need.
To accomplish this, the govern-ment would estimate the amount of any of these crops needed dur-ing a year and then divide this estimate among states, counties and farms.

Farmers who stayed within their allotted share would receive benefit payments, and loans on stored supplies. If supplies be-came excessive in spite of these controls, then definite limits would be placed upon sales, providing two-thirds of the farmers voting on these controls approved.

These marketing limits, or quotas, would then apply to all farm-ers, and sales above quotas would be penalized through taxes.

Release Stores.
Whenever supplies became short and prices climbed, the govern-ment would release stored sup-plies.

The house approved a 95-page bill embodying this general plan on December 10. It differs in many details from the senate measure.

Chief differences are that under the senate bill controls would ap-ply when crop supplies were at lower levels, and penalties for ex-cess sales would be much higher.

Pair Start Skiing Trek, Cleveland to New York

CLEVELAND, Dec. 17.—(UP)—Mr. and Mrs. Travis Virmelson waved warm mittens at college chums tonight and started on what they believe is the longest skiing trip ever attempted in this country—a trek from Cleveland to New York.

The 800-mile snow journey, according to Virmelson, 23, and unemployed, will be made for "sheer love of adventure." Mrs. Virmelson, 18, and pretty, is going along because she does not want to "be alone."

They plan their trip over the open fields and through the most remote eastern mountain sec-tions.

FRANK TO ACCEPT IF AFFAIRS PERMIT

Former University Head Asked To Head Committee on Program.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, of the Republican national com-mittee, announced tonight Dr. Glenn Frank had informed him he would accept the chairmanship of the party's committee on program if he were able to arrange his busi-ness and personal affairs.

Hamilton said the former pres-ident of the University of Wis-consin had told him at a six-hour conference that he considered the offer of the chairmanship an honor, but that he would not be able to say whether he could accept it "for a few days."

A formal statement issued by the party chairman said: "As the result of the delibera-tions of the executive committee of the Republican national com-mittee concerning the choice of a chairman for the program com-mittee, which was appointed Thursday at St. Louis, I came to Chicago today to tender this position to Glenn Frank."

"The committee felt that his constructive attitude toward na-tional affairs and the preeminent position which he occupies excep-tionally qualifies him for this honor."

Postpones Decision.
"After a visit with Mr. Frank, he authorized me to make the following statement: 'If I am able to arrange my personal and business affairs, I shall accept this position as the greatest honor and obligation of my life. I cannot know for a few days.'"

Frank, at 50, was offered an opportunity to assume his first active role in the party's affairs after winning wide notice as an edu-cator, editor, author and orator. Gannett Declines.

Frank E. Gannett, Rochester publisher, who was among those named yesterday to serve on the committee, today told Frank de-clining the appointment on the ground his activity as chairman of the Committee to Uphold Con-stitutional Government, a non-partisan group, transcends party issues.

In New York, Amos Pinchot, another appointee to the program committee, sent a telegram to John Hamilton, the party chair-man, declining the post for similar reasons.

He said he was serving on Gan-nett's committee.

Nurse's Suicide Laid to Prince's Fickle Affections

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(UP)—The fluttering affections of Prince Michael Radziwill, millionaire Polish aristocrat, were blamed today for the suicide of Miss Mary Jose-phine Atkinson, his comely nurse and companion for nine years.

The Paddington coroner's court was told that the 49-year-old woman's unrequited love for the prince led to her death—with a bullet from a pearl-handled revolver through her brain—in a small London hotel.

The 67-year-old prince, whose romantic escapades have intrigued Europe for nearly a half century, announced recently that he in-tended to marry a third time, and that his bride would be a Jewish beauty named Jeannette Such-ekov.

The prince's family is bitterly opposed to his marriage to the Jewish woman, who is only 28, and has brought suit in the Polish courts to deprive him of the management of his vast estates.

Miss Atkinson, it was revealed today, was to have been one of the principal witnesses.

ACCUSED OFFICER, A. F. JONES, RESIGNS

Patrolman Charged With Being Drunk on Duty
November 27.

The resignation of Patrolman A. F. Jones, who was charged with being drunk on duty last November 27, was accepted last night at a meeting of the police committee of city council.

The officer's resignation said he "didn't want to reflect discredit on either the department or my su-perior officers."

The committee, with G. Dan Bridges, chairman, presiding, voted to restore beer and wine li-censes to Bill Crisp, operator of a Walton street establishment, and George Sorenson, operator of a tavern at 663 Peachtree street.

Crisp recently was fined and received a suspended sentence on gaming charges, while Sorenson was recently charged with selling liquor.

The following men from the supernumerary list were added to the regular police rolls, effective immediately: B. H. Brannon, S. C. Peoples, D. H. Samples and W. T. Laseter.

WPA TO TAKE OVER CITY SEWER SYSTEM BUILDING PROJECT

Completion of Metropolitan Trunk Line Is Expected Within 18 Months.

Completion of the metropolitan sewers system within the next 18 months was seen yesterday as the city bond commission and city council's sewer committee agreed on provisions of a new proposal under which WPA is to take over work on the project.

Under the agreement reached by the city committees, $97,000 that remains out of the $1,000,000 sanitary sewer bond issue of 1935 will be placed at disposal of WPA authorities.

The agreement, drawn up in form of a resolution to city council, places the entire project in hands of WPA, which in turn will have charge of all expenditures. These will be made on requisition, the money remaining in the city's treasury.

The resolution calls for immediate audit of the present funds and a final audit upon completion of the sewers program. Provided also was a $450 fund for the pending audit and a fund "not to exceed $500" for the final audit.

The ratified agreement was reached Thursday afternoon when city, county and WPA authorities met in the office of Miss Gay B. Shepperson, state WPA administrator, to iron out differences between the three agencies which had been holding up progress with the program.

Fulton county agreed at that time to put up an additional $250,000 in cash or materials while city officials agreed to turn over the $97,000 bond fund.

Of the original 70 miles of sewer trunk lines in the metropolitan program, approximately 40 miles remain to be completed, William J. Hansell, city sewers engineer, said.

With favorable council action Monday, work will begin immediately. Crushed stone will be delivered by WPA at once, ending the dispute between city and county as to responsibility for furnishing the crushed stone for completion of Intramural creek disposal plant.

The last loan was for 700,000,000 marks ($282,225,300) issued September 10, 1937.

STUDY OF ROAD SLASH RESTS ON COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(P)—Representative Cartwright, Democrat, Oklahoma, chairman of the house roads committee, said tonight that while he did not favor President Roosevelt's proposal to curtail road authorizations for 1939, he would call a meeting of committee members to consider the proposal if they desired.

"A majority of the house committee has expressed opposition to this hasty action at this session," he said.

BIRTHDAY HUNTING TRIP FATAL TO 11-YEAR-OLD

TAMPA, Fla., Dec. 17.—(P)—The parents of Roy Alton Frier, 11, had told him he could go duck hunting on his birthday, which was today.

He borrowed a few shells from a neighbor, took his father's shotgun and pushed off in a boat at Gibsons near here.

A few minutes later, something happened, the gun was discharged and the full load was embedded in Roy's stomach. He died on the way to a hospital.

PLANE HITS MOUNTAIN, KILLING EIGHT PERSONS

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Dec. 17.—(UP)—Searching planes today found the wreck of the Lloyd Airways' tri-motor airliner Hunan, which crashed into the side of Sorata mountain, 50 miles north of here, killing three crew members and five passengers.

The accident occurred yesterday during a heavy storm in the Andes while the liner was en route to Apolo from La Paz.

New Zealand's Lake Taupo, famous fishing resort, is stocked with trout from the United States.

Octopuses and squids are regular articles of diet in many countries.

Queen Beats King At Clerk's Game

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(P)—Queen Elizabeth today beat King George throwing darts when they stopped in at Slough Social Service Center while motoring from Buckingham palace to the royal lodge at Windsor.

"I would like to try that," the Queen said after watching a crowd of clerks and factory workers playing the game.

Flinging three feathered darts at the target, she scored 21 points. Then the King, who threw left-handed, made three throws and scored 19.

The Queen said she had never played darts before, but described it as a "very sporty game."

Lindbergh and Flying Specialists Honor Wright as 'Father of Era'

Masters of Air Toast Shy Builder of First Power Plane.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(P)—Shy, self-effacing Orville Wright, co-builder of the world's first successful man-carrying power airplane, sat among some of the nation's most illustrious flying specialists tonight and heard himself named as the father of a new world era.

Wright, who initiated power flight 34 years ago today on the North Carolina sand dunes, made one of his rare trips away from his Dayton, Ohio, home to attend a meeting of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences.

Surrounding him were several hundred men credited with contributions to man's mastery of the air. Wright was guest of honor at the institute "honors night," held to present awards for research in aerodynamics.

Another guest was Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh. Dr. William F. Durand, professor emeritus, Stanford University, delivered the tribute to the work of Orville and his brother, Wilbur, who died 25 years ago.

The Daniel Guggenheim medal, presented to Orville in 1929 for notable achievements in the advancement of aeronautics, went this year to Dr. Hugo Eckener, the German airship specialist. In behalf of Dr. Eckener, who could not be present, it was accepted by Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, of the Lakehurst naval air station.

Earlier in the day Wright attended a lecture at Columbia University where he heard Professor B. Melville Jones, of Cambridge University, England, explain experiments he had made on the "boundary layer" of air which clings to airplane wings and retards speed. Wright tried to celebrate national aviation day by buying his way into a dinner where, also, he was guest of honor. But the institute returned his check.

REYNOLDS SEEKS RETURN OF WRIGHT PLANE TO U. S. WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(P)—A proposal that congress take the initiative in bringing Orville Wright's first airplane back to this country marked the thirty-fourth birthday of the airplane.

Senator Reynolds, Democrat, North Carolina, suggested on the senate floor that the old kite-like plane which the Wright brothers flew at Kittyhawk, N. C., be brought from a British museum. Reynolds introduced a bill to authorize a $50,000 expenditure for such purpose.

Wright sent the plane to England a decade ago after a dispute over a patent placed by the Smithsonian Institution on the aerodrome of Samuel Langley, another aviation pioneer. Reynolds said today he was confident that Orville Wright would "listen to the voice of his countrymen" and allow the airplane to be returned here.

The army paid tribute during the day to the Wright brothers, who built the army's first ship in 1908.

Johnson Lauds Brothers. Assistant Secretary of War Johnson said in a radio speech tonight that "aviation is deeply indebted to both the brothers and to the army air corps which put to practical use the Wrights' invention."

"To a considerable extent the progress of both civil and military aviation throughout the world is traceable directly to the work of the army at Wright field," he asserted.

Saying that the War Department since 1911 has spent more than $2,000,000,000 in aviation, and has devoted one-fourth of all its expenditures in the last five years to the purpose, Johnson asserted that these funds have kept the civilian industry alive.

POWER GROUP ORDERS PROBE OF N. C. PLANTS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(P)—The Federal Power Commission tonight ordered an investigation of five large hydroelectric plants on the Yadkin river in North Carolina to determine whether the plants interfered with the use and navigability of the stream.

Mail Carrier Gets Tired, Hides Letters in House

Mystery of why Atlantian in the Luckie street area recently failed to receive mail was cleared yesterday.

Arthur Reece, 49, negro letter carrier, who was held under $1,000 bond for grand jury action by United States Commissioner E. S. Griffith, admitted hiding hundreds of letters in a house on Parker street.

"I didn't mean to steal the mail," he testified. "I was just late and didn't have time to deliver it."

He was arrested on charges of unlawfully delaying, detaining and stealing 428 pieces of mail.

EX-CONVICT SLAIN BY CAROLINA POLICE

Officer Shot in Hand After Auto Is Forced Off Highway.

BELMONT, N. C., Dec. 17.—(P)—A man identified, Coroner C. C. Wallace said, as Clyde Cunningham, former South Carolina convict, was shot to death near here tonight after officers crowded his car off the highway.

The ex-convict shot Police Chief J. A. Burns, of Kings Mountain, wounding him in the hand, when he was cornered, and then the officers returned the fire. Cunningham was killed instantly.

Cunningham was wanted in Camden, S. C., on a charge of stealing an automobile there Monday night. He was released from the South Carolina state prison eight months ago after serving a term for a similar charge.

Sheriff J. H. McLeod, of Kershaw county, South Carolina, said he was convinced from a description that the slain man was Cunningham. Papers bearing the name and address, "Clyde Cunningham, Camden, S. C.," were found in the man's pockets. Sheriff McLeod is en route here to view the body.

Two More Guilty In Seder Death After Kidnaping

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Dec. 17.—(P)—A jury today convicted John Travis and Orville Adkins of the fatal kidnaping of Dr. James I. Seder, 79-year-old dry leader, returning a verdict that made the death penalty mandatory.

They will be sentenced December 22 with Arnett A. Booth, another former convict, who was convicted on the same charge last week.

Dr. Seder disappeared from his Huntington apartment on November 1 and 11 days later was found wandering near an abandoned mine, where he had been held captive 10 days. He died four days later of pneumonia which physicians said had been induced by exposure.

Relatives of the former missionary disclosed the kidnapers had demanded $50,000, which was never paid.

THREE WOMEN KILLED IN MATCH FIRM BLAST

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—(P)—Three of the seven young women who were burned when fire, following a series of explosions, swept the plant of the Superior Match Company, died today only a few hours apart.

They were Jean Lasky, 19; Anna Monde, 21, and Catherine Terleski, 19. The condition of another employee was critical.

PEDESTRIAN KILLED BENEATH BIG TRUCK

Companion Says Both Were Drinking, Tussled.

Crushed to death beneath the wheels of a heavy truck, Oscar Hart, 27, negro, of 57 Yonge street, was killed at about 8:45 o'clock last night on Bell street between Edgewood avenue and Fain street.

Traffic Patrolmen J. D. Timmie and W. J. Smith quote a companion, Lonnie Hall, negro, of 88 Pratt street, as saying both had been drinking and that Hart staggered into the street during a friendly tussle.

Hart's death marked the fifty-fifth traffic fatality within the city limits since the first of the year, and the fourth this month. The truck driver was listed as W. B. Massey, of a Krog street address.

FOUR CHILDREN PERISH IN MEXICAN FREEZE

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 17.—(P)—A dispatch from Guadalajara today said four children died in the village of Autlan as a result of the cold wave which is sweeping Mexico.

There were unprecedented heavy snows in the states of Guanajuato and Coahuila, with drifts two or three feet deep in some places obstructing highway and rail traffic. Crops were frozen in wide areas of Jalisco.

PISTOLS EXHIBITED IN OFFICER'S DEATH

Druggist Charged With Murder in Slaying of Marshal.

CLEVELAND, Miss., Dec. 17.—(P)—Two pistols figuring in the slaying of E. C. Harrington, night marshal at Shaw, were offered as exhibits today by the state in the trial of Claude Vance, 42, Shaw druggist, charged with murder.

John Almond, day marshal at Shaw, said he recovered the pistols on the scene of the shooting where Harrington's body lay and testified today that Vance's pistol showed all shells had been fired while there were one empty and five good bullets in Harrington's weapon.

Officers reported at the time of the killing that Vance and Harrington got into an argument over the arrest of a negro porter employed by Vance. James McBride, another state witness, testified that liquor was sold in a place behind the Vance drug store.

14 DORYMEN RESCUED. MACHIAS, Maine, Dec. 17.—(P)—The Portland fishing schooner Richard J. Nunan put into Cutler harbor near here tonight, reporting 14 dorymen, who became lost yesterday in a storm, were safe aboard.

Tribute Is Paid To Late Captain For Navigation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The navy paid honor today American sea captain, Thomas Sumner, who just 100 years accidentally discovered a principle upon which rests "the foundation of all the modern method of navigation."

Near the end of a stormy age from Charleston, S. C., to land, Captain Sumner evolved the theory of the "Summer line" of position which, with variations, short cuts, is now used by navigators of all nations.

"Celestial navigation has made more exact as well as simpler by the Summer method," navy said.

Officers explained Sumner learned that by means of a sextant, to determine the position of a celestial body above the horizon, it was possible to fix the position of a vessel along a celestial line.

THE SOUTH'S LARGEST DEPARTMENT STORE OF HOMEFURNISHINGS

Barbara Bell Afternoon Frock Offers Charm of Feminine Line

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Thursday.—Last night the Washington Symphony Orchestra gave a most beautiful concert with Josef Hoffmann as the soloist. I had to leave just before the end because I had arranged to call Seattle at a given time. I hated to miss the last number, which my guests who remained told me was a fine close to the concert.

On the whole, today has been a quiet day. Gray and foggy outside, but the planes seem to be flying overhead, so I imagine we are just in a pocket and the rest of the world may be enjoying the sunshine.

I like riding in this kind of weather. The landscape with the floating ice in the river and the brown-red look to the trees, blurred in the distance and yet so sharp near by that every little twig stands out, gives one a curious feeling of being very close to the earth and the things of nature. It blots out the cars and the busy streets.

Lunch alone in my sitting room with a friend, and then a visit to the National Broadcasting Company's new studios where Mr. Carlton Smith presided over the broadcast for the business and professional women. This group has been making a survey of women in various fields of occupation. This broadcast was to bring before their own members and the public the fact that they were offering new information of great interest to all.

Miss Earlene White, who is the new president of the National Business and Professional Women, is a very charming woman. I like doing anything, whether professional or purely recreational, with Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, who was there. She would probably say that I know her very slightly, but that does not prevent me from feeling that hers is a very alive and vital intelligence which I enjoy.

I forgot to mention that the President spent an evening at the rural arts exhibit before it closed. I understand that the special aspects of the division of resettlement, which is now incorporated in the Department of Agriculture, is responsible for fostering much of the work in that exhibition.

I do not mean by that, that they initiated it. I simply mean that they have encouraged many people who have been interested in keeping our rural arts alive. With WPA and NYC, they have been able to bring rural arts before the public so that we are really becoming conscious of the fact that we have folk arts and skills just as truly as have other nations.

I hope people will understand this is not unimportant, because it goes deeper into our national life than many think. It means recreation and mental and spiritual satisfaction in rural life. Without it we cannot hope to keep the best of our youth on our farms or in our semi-rural districts.

FRIENDLY COUNSEL

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name used in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

Mother Nature played several sassy tricks upon her girl children but the scurviest is this: A female can't grasp the fact that the man she loves doesn't necessarily love her. She won't believe that once having loved her, his love may grow cold, sicken and die. She won't admit to herself that love grown cold cannot be reheated or that dead love can't be quickened. In other words, a female's wits forsake her when she falls in love.

If it weren't so pathetic it would be funny. Women past 40, old enough to know better; spinsters, widows, grass and sod, as well as girls of teen age have a sublime faith in the power of their affection to compel the affection of the men they have set their hearts upon. When it comes to love and marriage they are the typical wish thinkers, believing what they want to believe, interpreting to suit themselves whatever is said or unsaid, done or left undone by the men in question.

Let a female set her heart upon a particular man and if he smiles and speaks politely she thinks he's interested in her. Let him pass over a bit of flattery and she grabs the bait and makes off with it. Let him ask for a date and another and another, bring her a box of candy, send her a bunch of flowers, take her to a show and she's convinced beyond the shadow of a doubt he's hers all hers.

Maybe he hasn't said a word of love; maybe he has no interest beyond being amused and entertained; maybe he wouldn't marry her if she were the last woman alive. Well you can't tell her that. So long as he comes and keeps coming, gives and keeps giving, she believes he prefers her above all others. Actions speak louder than words and his actions could mean but one thing—to her.

Every day their letters arrive: pouring out grief, whistling in the dark, "I know he loves me. I know it." There's the girl whose lad leaves town, promising to write every day, phone on holidays and come when he can. He doesn't keep a promise. He doesn't even answer her letters. She's willing to face the fact that he's slid out. She is not. The new job has him down. He hasn't received her letters. She can contrive more imaginary excuses for his fade-out than a schoolboy explaining class out to the teacher.

Then there's the girl who feels the barrier rising between her and the dearly beloved. He has to work late and breaks a date now and again. When he comes he talks of his work and the weather—no more rapturous discussion of their future together, no more impatience with third parties who break in on the date. Perfectly willing to go to a party or to the movies when in the old days he wanted close communion by the fireside. Does she believe he's lost his taste for her? She does not. He is sure it is only a phase and he will snap out of it.

And the older woman who has been nursing the silent partner and seawarmer: feeding him, flattering him, cajoling him to say something—without success. Will she admit that she's liked? Not so long as he rings her bell, eats her bread, drinks her tea and warms her chairs. She'll get him yet but she would like a few suggestions for opening oysters. All she lacks is skill and she's certain she can acquire it.

You have to give the girls credit; they have the courage of their convictions and when they convict a man of loving them it's a life sentence to escape from which taxes a man the limit of his ingenuity. CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

IF YOU WANT MORE ATTENTION SPRUCE UP YOUR CONVERSATION

KEEP YOUR TALK LIVELY, UP TO DATE

When you come right down to it, isn't it what you say and how you say it that holds a beau or wins a friend or gets a job?

So isn't it appalling to think that some people go on harping on the same old out-dated line and annoying with the same old mannerisms?

There's poor Jill—she hasn't added a new topic to her line of chatter since high school.

No wonder everybody turns to Laura, who has no more education but whose talk is fresh, entertaining, stimulating. By making a list of topics and keeping herself informed about them, she's always conversationally on her toes.

What topics are on her list? Here are three which Laura calls her old reliables—good every everywhere.

1. The news event of the day. It may be serious—a war scare. Or frivolous—a duchess starts a new fashion.

2. A story about a personality. Easy to find one—about Dolores

Diaz's latest witty retort to her co-star, John James, or how the new best seller was discovered.

3. A joke. Keep stocked on these reliable three but don't stop with them. Constantly add new topics to your repertoire—increase your charms—widen your circle of friends.

But be sure you don't get like Jane Snopes, who can talk about anything and still isn't popular. Jane's mannerisms keep her down. She starts every sentence with "Do you know?" Her voice is too high. She "informs" you like a school teacher and sets your back up.

Easy to avoid such blunders when you know the rules of charming conversation. Our 40-page booklet, Improving Your Conversation, is packed with helpful tips for talk on every occasion. Send 15 cents for our booklet. Improving Your Conversation, to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

EXPECT STATIONARY PERIOD IN WEIGHT LOSS PROGRAM.

In reducing, you lose either weight or interest. As this is the logical period for a standstill in most of the reducing programs which began this fall, I want to forestall any loss of interest on your part by assuring you that such a standstill is only temporary.

This interval is nature's way of making your first weight losses permanent and, even though it holds over for three to six weeks, it may be regarded as a normal occurrence in your reducing course.

During this unexciting period you will do well to stabilize your first losses in weight. It would be wise to see your doctor. There is, possibly, some reason why you should not attempt to lose more than 10 or 15 pounds all together.

Do not let anything interrupt your exercise program. Well-toned muscles are your best insurance against an upward trend of the scales. Moreover, corrective exercise helps to reduce your measurements even while you are losing no weight. Most important of all, exercise has an astringent effect on the skin and prevents the sagging which is a hazard in the removal of an excessive amount of weight. This standstill period gives the skin a chance to adjust to a smooth covering and exercise during this period will increase the skin's tonicity.

Miss Brumby and Miss Roberts Make Debut at Brilliant Dance

MISS HELEN ROBERTS.

MISS ANN BRUMBY.

The Capital City Country Club was transformed into a Christmas scene for the brilliant debut dance of last evening at which Mr. and Mrs. W. Roy Roberts and Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Brumby formally presented their lovely daughters, Miss Helen Roberts and Miss Ann Brumby, at Atlanta society.

The receiving line stood in the lounge room in front of a bank of evergreens, interspersed with tall floor baskets of red roses and red poinsettias. Adding an effective bit of color were the many handsome flowers sent to the two honorees. The color motif of red, green and silver prevailed in this room and in the large ballroom. Southern smilax decorated the ceiling and encircled the chandeliers. A profusion of red roses, poinsettias and silver stars were arranged in attractive effect throughout the rooms.

Punch was served from buffet tables arranged in the ballroom and centered by plateaus of red roses and greenery. Tall candelabra placed at the ends of the tables held burning red tapers to further carry out the attractive Christmas color motif.

Receiving with the hosts and honorees were Miss Brumby's brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Hanks, of Rome; her aunt, Miss Evelyn Henry; Mrs. Max Clotfelter, of Marietta, aunt of Miss Roberts, and Miss Anne Pearsall, of New York City.

Miss Dorothy Brooks Weds William Tate In Marietta, Ga.

MARIETTA, Ga., Dec. 17.—The marriage of Miss Dorothy Brooks, of Richmond, Va., to William Byrd Tate Jr., of Marietta, took place here Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at Marietta First Presbyterian church, with Rev. J. H. Patterson, pastor, performing the ceremony.

Miss Lucy Bailey, the organist, played the musical program and ushers were Randolph Brooks, of Atlanta; Reginald Brooks, of Richmond, Va., brothers of the bride; Frank McNeil, of New York; Harry DuPre Jr. and Bassford Field, of Macon.

Miss Mary Collier, of Atlanta, was maid of honor, and Miss Ada Byrd McNeil, of New York, was junior bridesmaid. They were gowned alike in eggshell tulle, made with tight-fitting bodices, and the off-the-face shoulder necklines were finished with a pleated ruffle. The full skirts were trimmed with pleated ruffles applied in swirl design. They carried old-fashioned bouquets of red roses and valley lilies, outlined with red tulle and white lace, and tied with narrow red velvet ribbons.

The beautiful bride entered with her father, Edgar W. Brooks Jr., of Petersburg, Va., who gave her in marriage. She was gowned in broad ivory satin with trimming of old rosepoint lace. The lines of the gown featured an off-the-shoulder neckline finished with rosepoint lace, a tight-fitting bodice and very full skirt which extended into a court train.

The gown was first worn by the bridegroom's great-grandmother, Cynthia Kent, of Montgomery county, Virginia, in March, 1826, having been brought to this country for the bride from England on a sailing vessel. The ivory tulle skirt extended into a court train of duchesse lace and fell in graceful folds the length of the train. White orchids and valley lilies composed the colonial bouquet carried by the bride. John Collier Tate, only brother of the groom, was best man.

No wedding reception was held on account of recent bereavements in the family of the groom, but a small group of relatives and intimate friends met informally at the home of the groom's mother to witness the departure of the bride and groom.

Mrs. Tate traveled in a three-piece suit of English wool in beige and London tan with accessories to match, and a shoulder spray of orchids. After a wedding trip to Florida and Cuba the couple will reside here with the groom's mother at 905 Cherokee street.

Miss Davis Feted.

Miss Dorothy Davis, whose marriage to Harry Gunnin will take place on December 21, was central figure yesterday at the luncheon at which Miss Anne Bell entertained at the Capital City Club.

Mrs. John M. Bell, mother of the hostess, assisted in entertaining.

The table decorations featured a mound of sweetheart roses and violets to match the favors, which were old-fashioned roses and sprays of roses and violets.

Invited were Misses Davis, Ruth McCarty, Alberta Bell, Dorothy Malone, Lulu Sims, Betty Hatcher, Vida Barnwell, Dorothy Hagwell, Patricia Poole, Elizabeth McKillop and Marjorie Armstrong.

COOLER TEMPERATURES DUE IN ATLANTA TODAY

Cooler temperatures today will bring an end to the balmy weather which has prevailed in Atlanta for the past few days, the weatherman predicted yesterday.

The mercury will drop to 50 degrees this morning with a low reading of 40 degrees in prospect for Sunday morning. Forecaster George W. Mindling announced that the cooler weather anticipated is only seasonal, however, and that no serious cold wave is in sight. Skies will remain cloudy today.

Temperatures yesterday ranged between 56 and 68 degrees. Mild weather prevailed in most sections of the country yesterday as rains decreased the hazards of snow and sleet. A slight disturbance over southern Arkansas brought widespread rains, some squalls, and cooler temperatures to the Texas-Louisiana-Gulf coast area. The Weather Bureau at New Orleans said the storm held no threat of serious danger or damage to any locality.

Remember That Night

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

When Karen Mallare's foster-mother dies she decides to quit her dress shop job and go to New York to realize her ambition to be an actress. Jerry Forbes, who came to Harriston to work in his uncle's bank, begs her to marry him. She asks if he knows her mother. When she was six months old her mother, a young actress in a company that disbanded in Harriston, took a midnight train, leaving Karen in a hotel room. John and Betty Mallare adopted the pretty child and cheerfully slanted to keep the child in school and give her singing and dancing lessons. Jerry wishes her luck and says he'll be waiting for her. Her neighbor in New York is blond Roxanne Dell, who sings on a hotel roof. She is hard on the surface but Karen likes her. Karen is leaving a theater after seeing the famous Brenda Bonin in Philip Ashley's play, her handbag containing all her money falls in the lobby, and is kicked about by handsome men returns to the ship. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT VIII.

She wasn't a great singer, Kasten thought. She never would be. But she could put a song over and she was beautiful. That was the important thing—her being beautiful. Women might say, "She has no voice," but the men would say, "No, but she's beautiful."

Thanking the orchestra leader, Karen walked back to Kasten. "What kind of dress have you got?" he asked. Her eyes were grateful. "A gray chiffon one."

"No. That won't do. Get something bright."

"But gray is good. You don't see many gray evening dresses."

He grinned. Maybe the kid was right. "Okay. We'll see how you look tonight and if you don't look right, you'll have to get something taken downstairs."

Looking over her head, he called. "That's all, boys."

Karen said, "Thank you."

"You'll get used to it." She was a nice kid. Her eyes were grateful. "Now about some pictures. I'll tell you where to go..."

Ten minutes later she was walking in the warm June sun to a studio. She had been terrible, she knew. Why had he taken her? Men like Sam Kasten didn't hire you because they liked you or felt sorry for you. To them you were an investment from which they expected high dividends. But Roxanne's job was safe as long as she had it.

Seeing a tall man in brown a few feet away from her, she slackened her pace and her heart seemed to stop. Philip! If it were he, he would say in his amused, suave voice, "Karen, we meet again." And she could hate him and love him in the same breath. But it was not Philip and she hurried on.

There was a letter postmarked from Harriston when she reached her room late that afternoon. Lying across the studio bed she tore it open. It was from Cora Hillman who wrote, "I thought you might like to know that Jerry is 'dating' Mary Catherine Halsey almost every night. Somehow I don't like it because I know she's only catching him on the rebound."

"How is New York? You can have it, darling, but I'll take Harriston. I've a house that isn't paid for and a husband who will never be rich but I'll take them any time to walking hard pavements and eating in automats and living in one room. I'd rather be a big fish in a little pond. Ted was asking last night how you were. I said I hoped you'd either come back in a milk coat and an imported car or know you were licked soon enough to come back and marry Jerry. Write and tell me about you. I might be thrilled but I won't be envious. While you're trying to become famous, I'm housecleaning and all steamed up over new summer rugs and love it!"

Smiling, Karen folded the letter slowly. Cora had been sensible enough to know that New York had defeated her. She had Ted and love in white cottage with green shutters. "I'd have given up and gone back if I had not met Philip," she thought, looking out the small window at the sunset. But Philip had been her challenge. To make him proud of her, to make him see her some day, not as a stubborn, fighting girl alone, but as an actress.

The hotel roof, its daytime ugliness gone, was alive with people when, wearing the graceful gray chiffon dress and the white satin coat, Karen arrived that night. With a big cigar in his mouth, Sam Kasten waited by the entrance.

Hiding her nervousness with a crooked smile, Karen said, "Well, I'm here."

His shrewd little eyes narrowed. "You need more make-up. On the eyes. You know. Lolita'll help you." Maybe he was crazy, he thought, leading the way. Maybe she'd get stage fright and cry or faint or something.

He knocked against a door and a high feminine voice asked, "Yes? Who is it?"

"I'm sending Miss Mallare in. Help her get fixed up." Looking down at Karen's shining dark head, he said, "You're on first, I'm depending on you. Good luck, kid." Tomorrow, he thought, he'd either have a headache or a new blues singer would be launched upon a career. Oh, well, take a chance. This was a game of chance anyway.

Lolita's black eyes flashed through a mask of cold cream. "Hullo," she said with a hint of Spanish accent. "You're so pale! Much too pale. The lights makes you look dead. The eyes should sparkle. Poor Roxanne! She loves him so much. Her Bill. She talks about him all the time. Come, I'll fix you up." Darkening Karen's thick dark lashes, she continued in her high, excited voice, "Now don't be frightened. Look at one man and sing to him as if you love him very much."

"I can't help it. I am scared."

"Tonight? Yes! But tomorrow night a little less. You know. There! Don't let Sam scare you. He doesn't say much but he's, he's tapped her head, he thinks! You know what he thinks?" She laughed. "That all the men will think you are very beautiful."

A few minutes later as she stood in the narrow hall, she heard the orchestra leader introduce her. Philip were here. "Sing to him as if you love him very much."

But when she was standing in the spotlight, she could distinguish no particular face. The music began slowly...

Looking at her, slim and dark haired with the pearly gray chiffon spilling gracefully about her tall-heeled silver sandals, Sam Kasten was still convinced that she would never be a great singer but he knew that she would be a great actress.

Five nights later Philip came with young Tommy Nolting. The place was crowded. The waiters led them to a table near the orchestra.

Coming on, Karen saw him. But it was the tall blond young man who sang and Tommy responded with a flattered smile.

In the doorway Sam Kasten wagged his nearly bald head. Tommy Nolting, the playboy, as Philip Ashley, the playwright, had said, was a smart man or else it had been his lucky day the day Karen Mallare came to him.

Her songs over, Karen lowered her head, smiled, and left the spotlight. In the narrow little hall before the dressing room she stopped and pressed her hand against her burning face. Philip! Would he be there when she sang again?

Tommy Nolting turned to Philip with a pensive smile. "I've never seen her before. How'd I miss her? And she was singing to me. Say, she's not bad at all. I'm staying right here until I see her again. I wonder who she is."

Philip's brown eyes were amused. He wished he could turn back his head and laugh "Control your excitement. I know her."

"You do?"

"Her name is Karen Mallare and she's been in New York only a few weeks. She came to go to the stage. Serious drama, you know." What fine dreams she had had the first night he had talked to her! For a child, her dreams had brought her this. Beauty for sale, he thought grimly. Men like Tommy would see her and admire her and marry her...

"Loosen up a more," Tommy said. "For a man in love you certainly get around." He grinned at Philip. "But hands off. You might have discovered her but you're pretty serious about her, aren't you?"

"Never more serious. And it's been perfect. No quarrels. No misunderstandings. Everything mutual. She's perfect. And she has enough on her mind without thinking I'm taking a short romantic excursion with a small town girl with stage ambitions! Besides, he wanted to light a cigaret, 'how do I know she has anything but a fighting heart? She has that, all right.'"

Tommy grinned. "And that's not all. She's beautiful."

"She's a lovely girl," Philip said seriously. "Too sweet and lovely for what she's doing. Funny that we can't seem to escape each other. Brenda thinks she's beautiful, too. But I think Brenda hopes she'll go back to the small town boy and forget Broadway."

He smiled and looked away. His eyes were amused and thoughtful. "But, Karen Mallare has hitched her wagon to a star."

Tommy lifted his glass. "We're staying. I'm going to meet her. You don't mind, do you?"

Yes, he did mind. He knew Tommy. New face, new fancy, new horsey, parties... Year in and year out since he had inherited more money than he could spend he had made the same merry rounds. Philip had not seen him for quite some time but tonight he had called, saying he had just got back from his farm in Maryland and how about their getting together tonight?

Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle.

UNCLE RAY'S Corner

A LITTLE SATURDAY TALK.

Yesterday I spoke about the figures of people who died when buried under ashes cast forth by Mt. Vesuvius long ago. I saw a number of these figures in glass cases during a visit to Pompeii. The figures are the usual bodies of people. The flesh wasted away, but before that happened, the ashes had set. Where the bodies had lain, hollows were left. The work of "digging up" Pompeii has been going on for centuries. A few buildings were found when a canal was cut about 400 years ago. Most of the excavating has been done since the year 1806. More than one-third of the city is still covered, but men are working to bring it to light.

Finding hollows in different places, a scientist had a good idea. He obtained some wet plaster, and put it in a hollow. When the plaster hardened, it had the shape of a human being!

That plan was carried out time and again, and now we have figures of people as they looked when they died under the ashes.

My guide said that some of the plaster figures contain skeletons. One figure I saw was of a man who fell dying while he held a sash over his mouth. Deadly gas was in the air when the ashes and cinders fell on Pompeii. Many, if not most, of those who died were victims of the gas.

In another case I saw the figure of a dog which was chained when the eruption took place. Still another case contains a little child, about five years old.

So today the city has come back to life, in at least a small sense. We see homes and temples of the people. We see streets along which they walked, or rode in chariots. We see the theater where they sat in the open air and watched plays.
